PREFACE.

In the text of this book I have followed implicitly that of Kraner and Hofmann's De Bello Civili, tenth and much improved edition, 1890. By adopting some excellent emendations of Madvig and other scholars, Hofmann has got rid of several blemishes which disfigured the common text. Though not dealing with properly critical matter, I have always called attention to the vulgate where it involves a serious difference in translation or a real difficulty, for the sake of boys in a mixed class, where all may not use the same text.

In a few cases information has been added in the Index which might have been given in the Notes.
PREFACE.

I must express my obligations to Kraner and Hofmann's Commentary, as well as to Mr. Moberly's excellent edition in the Clarendon Press. In the Historical Sketch I have followed Kraner pretty closely, and to those who wish for a fuller treatment of the subject I can recommend Mr. Froude's most interesting Caesar.

INTRODUCTION.

I. HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In order to understand the causes of the civil war it is necessary to know something not only of Caesar's military career, the history of which he has given us in the eight books De Bello Gallico, but of his previous life as a politician, and especially of his relations with Pompey, who was for some years his friend and ally, and then became his bitter enemy.

It would take far too much space to attempt to vindicate Caesar's unconstitutional actions, especially the high-handed course pursued by the First Triumvirate and their setting aside of the Senate's authority. This has been ably done by Mr. Froude in his Caesar, as well as by others; but any one who reads Sallust's sketches of the corruption and incapacity of senatorial rule in the Catiline and Jugurtha must see that the old order of things had become thoroughly rotten and unworkable. Caesar saw this clearly and acted accordingly, but he had to contend against a mass of prejudice, and the "vested interests" of the nobility, pledged to maintain at all costs the old system, and at last fell a victim to their selfish revenge, when his work of reform was only begun.

§ 1. We will take up the history at the year 61 B.C. when Pompey returned from the East after concluding the Mithridatic War with splendid success, bringing home a vast sum of money to the treasury, unlike Lucullus and other generals who had enriched themselves enormously in the wars. He was then unquestionably the greatest man at Rome, but was regarded with great jealousy by nobles like Lucullus and Metellus, who had not gained such a reputation for honesty and ability. He had pledged himself to provide handsomely for the soldiers who had helped to win his victories, but was violently opposed in the senate by his rivals, and so found himself obliged, in 60 B.C., to seek help from the popular party, which was then led by Caesar. The latter had just returned from Spain, where he had been propraetor, and needed some powerful support in order to win the consulship for 59 B.C. He persuaded Pompey to form an alliance with the millionaire M. Crassus, urging that his enormous wealth would be a great help to them, and probably regarding him as a kind of counterpoise to Pompey's power. So an agreement was made between these three with the object of preventing any measure being passed which was displeasing to any one of them. This alliance is known as the First Triumvirate.
§ 2. Caesar was duly elected consul, and carried a number of useful laws called after him Leges Juliae, in spite of the opposition of the nobles and of his colleague Bibulus. Among these was the Lex Julia agraria, which was designed to reward Pompey’s veterans, and provided that the public land in Campania should be parcelled out among 20,000 of the poorer citizens who had three or more children, the Asiatic treasure to be used in buying land, if the public land were not sufficient. Another measure was intended to gain the support of the Equites, or Knights, who were an important body in the state. It granted the farmers of the taxes (publicani) in Asia a remission of one-third of the sum they had agreed to pay the Senate for the privilege of collecting the taxes, as their offer had been too high. A third enactment ratified all Pompey’s arrangements in Asia, which the Senate had not agreed to do. Lastly, a law of the tribune Vatinius secured for Caesar himself the government of Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum for five years, with extensive powers. To these provinces the Senate reluctantly added Transalpine Gaul, which was then limited to the so-called Provincia or Provence. Thus the Senate’s power was broken, and Caesar entered on the career of conquest which is recorded for us in the De Bello Gallico. His object was to free his country from the one serious external danger which threatened her; it is not necessary to assume, as is so often done, that his motive was to form and train a standing army with which he might establish his own supremacy, a result to which he was afterwards driven by circumstances.

§ 3. Meanwhile Pompey, who though a great soldier was no politician, did not succeed in keeping order at Rome. Now that Caesar was gone the mob had their own way, and the disorder which prevailed led to a reaction in favour of the Senate. To check this the Triumvirs with their chief supporters met in conference at Lucca, 56 B.C., where they resolved on strong measures. Pompey and Crassus became consuls 55 B.C., and passed various laws in their own and Caesar's interest. Pompey obtained the two Spanish provinces, Crassus that of Syria for five years with extensive powers, and Caesar's command in Gaul was prolonged for five years more by a law of the two consuls.

a conflict of interests between them, and gave the senatorial party, or Optimates, an opportunity to draw Pompey to their side, as they hoped first to crush Caesar by his means, and afterwards to get rid of him too.

§ 5. This was in 52 B.C., on occasion of a violent fray between two desperadoes, Clodius and Milo, in which the former was killed. He was a champion of the democratic party, Milo of the Senate, and terrible riots ensued, during which, among other outrages, the Senate house was burned by the mob. In this emergency the Senate appointed Pompey sole consul, with power to levy troops and take other needful measures. He put down the disorder with a strong hand, brought Milo, who was a candidate for the consulship, to trial, and secured his exile. In this consulship Pompey first showed his altered attitude towards Caesar by choosing as his colleague Q. Caecilius Metellus Scipio (one of Caesar’s strongest enemies), and marrying his daughter Cornelia. Besides getting his own command in Spain prolonged for five years, he carried some important laws, including one called Lex Pompeia de Provinciis, providing that the government of provinces should no longer be entrusted to consuls and praetors immediately at the close of their term of office, but after an interval of at least five years. This made it easier for the Senate to give the provinces to none but their own partisans. Under another of Pompey’s laws, De Ambitu, it was hoped that Caesar might be brought to trial and condemned on his return to Rome. He was at this time engaged in putting down the great revolt in Gaul, headed by Vercingetorix; however, his friends succeeded in getting a law passed by the ten tribunes, enacting that, when his command in Gaul was about to expire, he should be allowed to become a candidate for the consulship without going to Rome (ut eius ratio absentis haberetur, ch. 32). This, however, did not quite secure Caesar from danger, as his command was to expire on March 1st, 49 B.C., and he would not enter on the consulship till January 1st, 48, so it would be needful also to get his command prolonged till the latter date. But the most serious blow was aimed at Caesar, after the passing of this law by the ten tribunes, when by a law, De Jure Magistratuum, carried by Pompey, any candidature for an office while absent from Rome was forbidden in general terms without making an exception in favour of Caesar, and thus the special law or Privilegium just mentioned was virtually repealed. Pompey promised indeed to secure this special privilege for Caesar, but as he had no power to cancel by his own authority a law passed by the people, this assurance was worth nothing.

§ 6. In the following year, B.C. 51, the consul, M. Marcellus, proposed, firstly, that Caesar should be recalled before the termination of his command on the ground that the war in Gaul was over; and secondly, that he should not be allowed to stand for the consulship while away from Rome, because the Privilegium in his favour had been repealed by a subsequent law. However, only the latter of these resolutions was passed by the Senate, as many of its members wished to secure themselves in any event, and the discussion about the province was fixed to come off at the latest in March of that year.

§ 7. For the year 50 B.C., which seemed likely to settle the contest one way or the other, Caesar secured the support of the tribune C. Scribonius Curio by undertaking to pay his debts, which were enormous. Curio professed to be a strong supporter of the Senate and opponent of Caesar, but at the same time made himself very popular and secured a pretext for quarrelling with the Senate by proposing some measures for the benefit of the lower orders. So in March, when the discussion about the provinces was to begin, Curio announced that he would put his 'veto' on the discussion in the Senate of any other subject till his proposals should be considered and voted on by the people. In April came the senatorial 'recess' (discessus senatus), and it was not till May that the discussion really took place, on Curio withdrawing his opposition. He then declared that it was for the public interest that Caesar should be recalled, but that in that case Pompey too should give up his provinces and armies, as, if he retained them, he would be equally dangerous to the public liberty; he therefore urged the speedy recall of both at once, but announced that he would oppose that of either general singly.

§ 8. Curio at once became extremely popular, and Pompey, seeing that public feeling was against him, informed the Senate that he was ready to resign his provinces and armies if the public interest required it, and a debate consequently took place about this proposal. The majority of the Senate voted that Pompey's recall should be agreed to, if Caesar's could not be secured otherwise, but that Caesar alone should be recalled, if possible. The recall of both was moved by C. Marcellus, but at his private instigation a senator demanded that the votes respecting Caesar and Pompey should be taken separately. The result was that Caesar's recall was voted almost unanimously, as his supporters had pledged themselves to vote for the recall of both, while that of Pompey was rejected by a large majority. The tribune Curio at once vetoed this resolution, and by an exercise of his official privilege demanded that a vote should next be taken on both proposals together, the result of which was that a large majority now voted for the recall of both rivals. However, this was vetoed in turn by a hostile tribune, so the discussion closed in June without any result being arrived at either way.

§ 9. The party of the Senate, however, succeeded in considerably weakening Caesar's army. The Parthians were now threatening Syria and Cilicia, and to protect these provinces C. Marcellus proposed that Caesar and Pompey should each furnish one legion which was to be sent to Asia immediately. Pompey had previously lent Caesar a legion for the war in Gaul, and this he now demanded back as his contribution for Syria. Caesar had to send one of his own legions as well, but instead of being sent on to Asia the legions were detained in Italy, to be used, when required, against Caesar himself.

§ 10. At the consular elections in July of this year two violent enemies of Caesar were elected, L. Lentulus and C. Marcellus, while he could only count on the support of two of the tribunes, M. Antonius and Q. Cassius Longinus. In August he came into Northern Italy, and during September travelled about the towns of Gallia Cisalpina under the pretext of supporting M. Antonius in his candidature for the augurship. This visit to Italy caused great excitement and alarm at Rome, as it was reported that Caesar was rapidly collecting his forces for an invasion. On the strength of this report the consul elect, C. Marcellus, proposed in the Senate that the two legions which had been taken from Caesar should be sent for to defend the city, that troops should be levied throughout all Italy, and supreme command of all the forces of the State entrusted to Pompey. Curio by his veto prevented this vote from becoming a legal decree,¹ and the majority of the Senate did not dare to support Marcellus in his proposal to deal summarily with the tribune. He therefore on his own responsibility called upon Pompey to undertake the defence of the State, and on Pompey accepting the charge, Curio, no longer feeling safe at Rome, fled to Caesar.

§ 11. Meanwhile Caesar had returned to Further Gaul, and there mustered his legions, ordering the thirteenth to proceed to Italy. He now returned to Cisalpine Gaul about the middle of November. He still would not break off negotiations, wishing the odium and responsibility of a war to fall on his enemies, so that public opinion might be on his side. Accordingly he proposed three successive compromises:—1. That he and Pompey should both resign their provinces, and that he should then return to Rome as a private citizen and become a candidate for the consulship. 2. That Pompey should keep his provinces and armies, if he himself were only allowed to retain Cisalpine Gaul with two legions till he became consul. 3. That he should retain Illyricum alone, with one legion. These proposals were discussed without any result by Pompey and his friends, but not in the Senate, and it was not till January 1st, 49 B.C., when Caesar's letter was delivered to the new consuls by Curio, that a public discussion on the subject took place. At this point the first book of the De Bello Civili begins, being really a continuation of the history from the eighth book De Bello Gallico, the end of which is lost.
Contrary to his custom in the De Bello Gallico, where each book contains the events of a whole year, Caesar divides the events of the year 49 B.C. between Books 1 and 2 of the De Bello Civili.

II. THE ROMAN ARMY.

§ 1. In Caesar's time the organization of the army had been considerably modified. The legion was divided into ten cohorts, each containing three maniples of Hastati, Principes, and Triarii respectively; and each of these in turn was composed of two centuries, usually called ordines, one of which was called prior, the other posterior, each under a centurion. A century theoretically contained 100 men, but at this period it had rarely more than fifty or sixty, thus a maniple had from 100 to 120, a cohort 300 to 360, and a legion (which perhaps never contained more than 5000 men) usually was only 3000 or 3600 strong.

§ 2. The Hastati, Principes and Triarii were not now distinguished, as in earlier times, by fighting in the first, second and third lines of the legion, nor by any difference in their equipment, all being armed with the pilum, which originally belonged to the Triarii alone, the other two lines being sometimes called antepilani. The names were probably retained more to distinguish the rank of the centurions than for anything else, the Triarii as before ranking highest, the Hastati lowest, while the priores came before the posterioriores. Of the ten cohorts again the first was the most honourable and the others followed in order, but it is a disputed point how the precedence of the centurions was determined. The usual view is that all the hastati posterioriores took lowest rank, beginning with the officer of the tenth cohort, who was called decimus hastatus posterior, and going on to the first cohort; next came all the hastati priores from the tenth (decimus hast. prior) to the first cohort; then the principes posterioriores, rising in the same order; then in like manner the principes priores. The centurions bore the same name as the centuries which they respectively commanded. Among the Triarii they were called pili, perhaps because originally this line alone carried the pilum, thus the junior officer of Triarii in the tenth cohort was decimus pilus posterior, the senior decimus pilus prior, and so on. The first officer among the Triarii was senior centurion of the whole legion, and was called centurio primi pili, primus pilus or primipilus; he was often said primum pilum ducere. He had special charge of the eagle (aquila) of the legion, though it was carried by an aquilifer.

According to this view the first ten centurions of the legion would be the pili priores, next the ten pili posteriores; then the principes priores and posterioriores, ten of each, followed by ten hastati priores, and, lastly, ten hastati posterioriores. But it is hardly likely that Caesar would have said of Q. Fulginius (ch. 46) that
"on account of his surpassing valour he had risen from lower posts" to that of primum hastatus, if this had only been the forty-first place among sixty centurions. There seems little doubt that the six officers of the first cohort at any rate took precedence of all the rest, so that Fulginius was fifth or sixth centurion of the legion, and probably those of the other cohorts took rank according to the number of their cohort. In Livy xlii. 34, a centurion named Ligustinus relates that he was first promoted from the ranks to command the decimus ordo hastatus; then to the primum hastatus prioris centuriae, next to the primum princeps prioris centuriae, and, finally, led the primum pilus. The promotion on which he dwells with most satisfaction as having been awarded by M. Porcius Cato, "the keenest observer and judge of valour among all living commanders," was to this very post of primum hastatus prior held by Fulginius.

§ 3. The defensive armour of the legionary consisted of a helmet, corselet, greaves, and shield. The helmet usually worn (galea) was of leather and bronze with a crest of red or black feathers, and on account of its weight was not put on except when the enemy was in sight: the corselet (lorica) was also of leather in thick overlapping strips, with a square plate of iron to protect the chest. The form and material were modified in later times. The greaves (ocreae) were of bronze, reaching above the knee, but it was usual at this time to wear only one, on the right leg. The shield (scutum) was about 4 feet long by 2½ broad, of strong wood covered with hide, with a metal rim at top and bottom, and a projecting boss in the centre (umbo). It was curved round slightly so as to protect the sides.

The offensive weapons were a short straight two-edged sword (gladius) which was worn on the right side by a belt going over the left shoulder, and a couple of pila or javelins. This missile consisted of a wooden shaft 4½ feet long, partly covered by an iron point of the same length, so that the whole measured rather less than 7 feet. It could be hurled with a rotary motion to a great distance.

Besides this weight of weapons and armour, the soldier on the march had to carry his own provisions, usually enough for a fortnight, cooking utensil, basket, some stakes (valli), a spade for entrenching, and a hatchet or saw. These things were collectively called sarcinae, usually weighing some 45 lbs. (English), and the soldier when carrying them was called impeditus, without them expeditus. The heavy baggage of the legion, such as tents, handmills, and engines of war, was called impedimenta, and carried by mules and other beasts of burden (iumenta).

§ 4. The usual formation for battle was in three lines—the triplex acies described in ch. 83. The first four cohorts of each legion formed the first line, beginning with the first cohort on the extreme right, and with spaces between equal to the front of a cohort. The next three cohorts were posted in the second line, opposite the vacant spaces in the first line, while the remaining three formed the third line, thus,

\begin{array}{cccc}
4 & 3 & 2 & 1 \\
7 & 6 & 5 & \\
10 & 9 & 8 & \\
\end{array}

The object of this chequer formation was to enable the first line to retire, if hard pressed, without throwing the second line into confusion. The men were drawn up ten deep. The standards (signa) of the cohorts were carried by signiferi. The foremost ranks of the first four cohorts, who marched before them, were called antesignani; they were the best men, and seem to have numbered about 200 in each legion (see chs. 43 and 57).

§ 5. In Caesar's time the Velites, or light-armed troops, of earlier times had been replaced by foreign auxiliaries, chiefly slingers (funditores) from the Balearic Isles, and archers (sagittarii) from Crete. They were usually stationed in the intervals of the cohorts, and being light troops could easily withdraw and leave room for the legionaries to advance or retreat. The old Roman legionary cavalry (equites) had also disappeared, and in their stead troops of Gallic, German, or Spanish horsemen were employed. They were commanded by a Roman, and divided into alae, turmae, and decuriae. Other auxiliary troops were levied in the provinces, as the eighty Spanish cohorts mentioned in ch. 39, some of which were scutatae, i.e., armed in the regular Roman fashion with the scutum, the others cetratae, armed with the native cetra, a light leather buckler. These auxiliary cohorts were also called alariae, a term formerly applied to the Italian Socii, ch. 83. Caesar had also German light infantry (Germani levis armaturae, ch. 83), and his opponents had a similar corps of Lusitani, ch. 48.

§ 6. The highest officers under the imperator, or commander-in-chief, were the legati, or commanders of brigades, who were appointed by the Senate, usually three in number, but in Gaul Caesar had ten. They were frequently intrusted with the charge of important expeditions or fortified camps.

The quaestors were properly civil magistrates appointed to look after the revenues of the provinces. In war they had charge of the military chest, paid the troops, and disposed of the booty, slaves, etc.

The highest legionary officers were the tribuni militum, six to each legion, only one of whom seems to have been on duty at a time. They were appointed by the state on the general's recommendation, and controlled the discipline of the camp, but were not usually intrusted with important military operations.

The centurions, sixty to each legion, were appointed by the general himself, always for tried merit and distinguished service.

Soldiers who had served the number of campaigns required by law could be again called out by a special summons of the commander-in-chief. They were then called evocati, had the same rank and pay as centurions, and were exempted from sentinel duty and entrenching work.

§ 7. Attached to each Roman army was a corps of engineers (fabri) who had charge of the engines of war (catapultae, ballistae) and constructed the towers (turre), mantlets (testudines), and penthouses (vineae), required in siege operations. Their chief officer was called praefectus fabrum (ch. 24). But many of the duties of modern ‘engineers’ were performed by the legionary soldiers, who carried tools with them, and all worked at the lines of the camp, which was entrenched wherever the army halted for a night.

§ 8. The plan of construction of a camp was as follows:—Two roads were marked out at right angles to each other, one fifty feet broad, called the Via praetoria, running along the length of the camp from the Porta praetoria, which was usually on the side nearest the enemy, to the Porta decumana on the opposite side, so called because the quarters of the rearmost cohorts (decumae cohortes) lay there. The other road, 100 feet broad, called Via principalis, ran across between the Porta principalis dextra and sinistra, and divided the camp into two unequal parts, one-third and two-thirds respectively. The smaller portion contained the Praetorium, or general's quarters, with the place of assembly, and quarters of the legati, quaestors and tribunes: the general's body-guard (cohors praetoria, ch. 75) also was quartered here. The larger part was assigned to the legionaries, cavalry, and auxiliaries, and was itself cut in two by a broad road, the Via quintana, running parallel to the Via principalis. No tents were pitched within 200 feet of the wall (vallum) of the camp, so that the enemy could not reach them with missiles or set them on fire.

The accompanying plan shows the main lines of the camp, though the exact position of the Praetorium is disputed. The vallum was built up of turf, earth, etc., and was usually finished off with a palisade of strong stakes (valli) at the top. There was a trench (fossa) running round outside, from which the earth and turf were taken. This had to be filled up by the enemy before they could advance to the assault of the vallum.
1. Litteris a C. Caesare consulibus redditis, aegre ab his impetratum est summa tribunorum plebis contentione, ut in senatu recitarentur; ut vero ex litteris ad senatum referretur, impetrari non potuit. Referunt consules de republica infinite. L. Lentulus consul senatui reique publicae se non defuturum pollicetur, si audacter ac fortiter sententias dicere velint; sin Caesarem respicient, atque eius gratiam sequantur, ut superioribus fecerint temporibus, se sibi consilium capturum neque senatus auctoritati obtemperaturum: habere se quoque ad Caesarem gratiam atque amicitiam receptum. In eandem sententiam loquitur Scipio: Pompeo esse in animo reipublicae non deesse, si 15 senatus sequatur; si cunctetur atque agat lenius, nequiquam eius auxilium, si postea velit, senatum imploraturum.

2. Haec Scipionis oratio, quod senatus in urbe habebatur Pompeiusque aberat, ex ipsius ore Pompei mitti videbatur. Dixerat aliquis leniorem sententiam, ut primo M. Marcellus, ingressus in eam orationem, non oportere ante de ea re ad senatum referri, quam dilectus tota Italia habit et| exercitus conscripti essent, quo praesidio tuto et libere senatus, quae vellet, decernere auderet; ut M. Calidius, qui censebat, ut Pompeius in suas provincias proficisceretur, ne qua esset armorum causa: timere Caesarem ereptis ab eo duabus legionibus, ne ad eius pericum reservare et retinere eas ad urbem Pompeius videretur; ut M. Rufus, qui sententiam Calidii paucis fere mutatis rebus sequabatur. Hi omnes convicio L. Lentuli consulis correpti exagitabantur.—Lentulus sententiam Calidii pronuntiatum se omnino negavit. Marcellus perterritus conviciis a sua sententia discessit. Sic vocibus consulis, terrore praesentis exercitus, minis amicorum Pompei plerique compulsi inviti...et coacti Scipionis sententiam sequuntur: uti ante certam diem Caesar exercitum dimittat; si non faciat, eum adversus rempublicam facturum videri. Intercedit M. Antonius, Q. Cassius, tribuni plebis. Refertur confestim de intercessione tribunorum. Dicuntur sententiae graves; ut quisque acerbissime crudelissimeque dixit, ita quam maxime ab inimicis Caesaris collaudatur.

4. Omnibus his resistitur omnibusque oratio consulis, Scipionis, Catonis opponitur. Catonem veteres inimicitiae Caesaris incitant et dolor repulsae. Lentulus aeris alieni magnitudine et spe exercitus ae provinciarum et regum appellantor omnibus largitionibus movetur, seque alterum fore Sullam inter suos gloritur, ad quam summa imperii redeat. Scipionem eadem spes provinciae atque exercituum impellit, quos se pro necessitudine partitum cum Pompeio arbitratur, simul iudiciorum metus, adulatio atque ostentatio sui et potentium, qui in republica iudiciisque tum plurimum pollebant. Ipse Pompeius, ab inimicis Caesaris incitatus et quod neminem dignitate secum exaequari volebat, totum se ab eius amicitia averterat et cum communibus inimicis in gratiam redierat, quorum ipse maximam partem illo affinitatis tempore iniunxerat Caesari; simul infamia duarum legionum permutus, quas ab itinere Asiae Syriaeque ad suam potentiam dominatumque convertérat, rem ad arma deduci studebat.

5. His de causis aguntur omnia raptim atque turbate. Nec docendi Caesaris propinquis eius spatium datur nec tribunis plebis sui periculi deprecandi neque etiam extremi iuris intercessione reitendii, quod L. Sulla reliquerat, facultas tribuitur, sed de sua salute septimo die cogitare coguntur, quod illi turbulentissimi superioribus temporibus tribuni plebis octavo denique mense suarum actionum respicere ac timere consuerant. Decurritur ad illud extremum atque ultimum senatusconsultum, quo nisi paene in ipso urbis incendio atque in desperatione omnium salutis senatorum audacia numquam ante descensum est: dent operam consules, praetores, tribuni plebis quique pro consulibus sint ad urbem, ne quid respublica detrimenti capiat.

8. Cognita militum voluntate Ariminum cum ea legione proficiscitur ibique tribunos plebis, qui ad eum confugerant, convenit; reliquas legiones ex hibernis evocat et subsequi iubet. Eo L. Caesar adulescens venit, 5 cuius pater Caesaris erat legatus. Is reliquo sermone confecto, cuius rei causa venerat, habere se a Pompeio ad eum privati officii mandata demonstrat: Velle Pompeium se Caesaris purgatum, ne ea, quae reipublicae causa egerit, in suam contumeliam vertat. 10 Semper se reipublicae commodae privatis necessitudinibus habuisse potiora. Caesarem quoque pro sua dignitate debere et studium et iracundiam suam reipublicae dimittere neque adeo graviter irasci inimicis, ut, cum illis nocere se speret, reipublicae 15 noceat. Pauca eiusdem generis addit cum excusatione Pompei coniuncta. Eadem fere atque isdem verbis praetor Roscius agit cum Caesare sibique Pompeium commemorasse demonstrat.
9. Quae res etsi nihil ad levandas iniurias pertinere videbantur, tamen idoneos nactus to which he replies, proposing terms, homines, per quos ca, quae vellet, ad eum perferrentur, petit ab utroque, quoniam Pompei mandata ad se detulerint, ne graventur sua quoque ad eum postulata deferre, si parvo labore magnas controversias tollere atque omnem Italiam metu liberare possint. Sibi semper primam fuisse dignitatem vitaque potiorem. Doluisse se, quod populi Romani beneficium sibi per contumeliam ab inimicis extorqueretur, ereptoque semestri imperio in urbem retraheretur, cuius absentis rationem haberì proximis comitiis, populus iussisset. Tamen hanc iacturam honoris sui reipublicae causa aequo animo tulisse. Cum litteras ad senatum miserit, ut omnes ab exercitibus discederent, ne id quidem impetravisse. Tota Italia dilectus haberì, retineri legiones II, quae ab se simulatione Parthici belli sint abductae, civitatem esse in armis. Quonam haec omnia nisi ad suam perniciem pertinere? Sed tamen ad omnia se descendere paratum atque omnia pati reipublicae causa. Proficiscatur Pompeius in suas provincias, ipsi exercitus dimittant, discendant in Italia omnes ab armis, metus e civitate tollatur, libera comitia atque omnis respublica senatui populoque Romano permittatur. Haec quo facilius certisque condicionibus fiant et iureiurando sanctantur, aut ipse proprius accedat aut se patiatur accedere; fore, uti per colloquia omnes controversiae componantur.
10. Acceptis mandatis Roscius cum L. Caesare Capuam pervenit ibique consules Pompeiumque invenit: postulata Caesaris renuntiat. Illi deliberata re respondent scriptaque ad eum mandata per eos remittunt; quorum haec erat summa: Caesar in Galliam revertetur, Arimino excederet, exercitus dimitteret; quae si fecisset, Pompeium in Hispanias iturum. Interea, quoad fides esset data Caesarem facturum, quae polliceretur, non intermissuros consules Pompeiumque dilectus.

11. Erat iniqua condicio postulare, ut Caesar Arimino excederet atque in provinciam revertetur, ipsum et provincias et legiones alienas tenere; exercitus Caesaris velle dimitti, dilectus habere; polliceri se in provinciam iturum neque, ante quem diem iturus sit, definire, ut, si peracto consulatu Caesaris non profectus esset, nulla tamen mendacii religione obstrictus videretur. Tempus vero colloquio non dare neque accessurum polliceri magnum pacis desperationem afferebat. Itaque ab Arimino M. Antonium cum cohortibus quinque Arretium mittit; ipse Arimini cum duabus subsistit ibique dilectum habere instituit; Pisaurum, Fanum, Anconam singulis cohortibus occupat.

12. Interea certior factus Iguvium Thermum praetorem cohortibus v tenere, oppidum munire omniumque esse Iguvinorum optimam erga se voluntatem, Curionem cum tribus cohortibus, quas Pisauri et Arimini habebat, mittit. Cuius adventu cognito, diffusus municipii voluntati Thermus cohortes ex urbe re-ducit et profugit. Milites in itinere ab eo discedunt ac domum revertuntur. Curio summa omnium voluntate Iguvium recipit. Quibus rebus cognitis confusus municipiorum voluntatibus Caesar cohortes legionis XIII ex praesidiis deducit Auximumque pro-ficiscitur; quod oppidum Attius cohortibus intro-ductis tenebat dilectumque toto Piceno circummissis senatoribus habebat.

13. Adventu Caesaris cognito decuriones Auximi ad Attium Varum frequentes conpels Attius Veniunt: docent sui iudicij rem non esse; neque se neque reliquos muncipes pati posse C. Caesarem imperatorem, bene de republica meritum, tantis rebus gestis oppido moenibusque prohiberi; proinde habeat rationem posteritatis et periculi sui. Quorum oratione permutus Varus praesidium, quod introduxerat, ex oppido educit ac profugit. Hunc ex primo ordine pauci Caesaris consecuti milites consistere coegerunt. Com-missio proelio deseritur a suis Varus; nonnulla pars militum domum discedit; reliqui ad Caesarem per-eniunt, atque una cum iis deprensus L. Pupius, primi pili centurio, adducitur, qui hunc eundem ordinem in exercitu Cn. Pompei antea duxerat. At Caesar milites Attianos collaudat, Pupium dimittit, Auximatibus agit gratias seque eorum facti memorem fore pollicetur.

15. Auximo Caesar progressus omnem agrum Picenum percurrit. Cunctae earum regionum praefecturae libentissimis animis eum recipiunt exercitumque eius omnibus rebus iuvant. Etiam Cingulo, quod oppidum Labienus constituerat suaque pecunia exaedificaverat, ad eum legati veniunt quaeque imperaverit se cupidissime facturos pollicentur. Milites imperat: mittunt. Interea legio xii Caesarem consequitur. Cum his duabus Asculum Picenum proficiscitur. Id oppidum Lentulus Spinther x cohortibus tenebat; qui Caesaris adventu cognito profugit ex oppido cohortesque secum abducere conatus magna parte militum deserit. Relictus in itinere cum paucis incidit in Vibullium Rufum missum a Pompeio in agrum Picenum confirmandorum hominum causa. A quo factus Vibullius certior, quae res in Piceno gereantur, milites ab eo accipit, ipsum dimittit. Item ex finitimis regionibus quas potest contrahit cohortes ex dilectibus Pompeianis; in his Camerino fugientem Lucilium Hirrum cum sex cohortibus, quas ibi in praesidio habuerat, excipit; quibus coactis xiii efficit. Cum his ad Domitium Ahenobarbum Corfinium magnis itineribus pervenit Caesaremque adesse cum legionibus duabus nuntiat. Domitius per se circiter xx cohortes Alba, ex Marsis et Paelandis, finitimis ab regionibus coegerat.

16. Recepto oppido expulsoque Lentulo Caesar whither Caesar conqueri milites, qui ab eo discesserant, hastens. dilectumque institui iubet; ipse unum diem ibi rei frumentariae causa moratus Corfinium contendit. Eo cum venisset, cohortes quinque prae- missae a Domitio ex oppido pontem fluminis interruptebant, qui erat ab oppido milia passuum circiter iii. Ibi cum antecursoribus Caesaris proelio commisso celeriter Domitiani a ponte repulsi se in oppidum receperunt. Caesar legionibus traductis ad oppidum constitit iuxtaque murum castra posuit.

17. Re cognita Domitius ad Pompeium in Apuliam peritos regionum magno proposito praemio cum litteris mittit, qui petant atque orent, ut sibi subveniat: Caesarum duo-bus exercitibus et locorum angustiis facile intercludi posse frumentoque prohiberi. Quod nisi fecerit, se cohortesque amplius xxx magnumque numerum senatorum atque equitum Romanorum in periculum esse venturum. Interim suos cohortatus tormenta in muris disponit certasque cuique partes ad custodiam urbis attribuit; militibus in contione agros ex suis possessionibus pollicetur, quaterna in singulos iugera et pro rata parte centurionibus evocatisque.

18. Interim Caesari nuntiatur Sulmonenses, quod oppidum a Corfinio vii milium intervallo abest, cupere ea facere, quae vellet, sed to invest the town. Caesar proceede, cupere ea facere, quae vellet, sed prohiberi, qui id oppidum vii cohortium praesidio tenebant. Mittit eo M. Antonium cum legionis xiii cohortibus quinque. Sulmonenses, simulatque signa nostra viderunt, portas aperuerunt universique, et oppidani et milites, obviam gratulantes Antonio exierunt. Lucretius et Attius de muro se deiecerunt. Attius ad Antonium deductus petit, ut ad Caesarem mitteretur. Antonius cum cohortibus et Attio eodem die, quo prefectus erat, revertitur. Caesar eas cohortes cum exercitu suo coniunxit Attiumque incolumem dimisit. Caesar primis diebus castra magnis operibus munire et ex finitimis municipiis frumentum comportare reliquasque copias exspectare instituit. Eo triduo legio VIII ad eum venit cohortesque ex novis Galliae dilectibus XXII equitesque ab rege Norico circiter CCC. Quorum adventu altera castra ad alteram oppidi partem ponit: his castris Curionem praefecit. Reliquis diebus oppidum vallo castellisque circumvenire instituit. Cuius operis maxima parte effecta eodem fere tempore missi ad Pompeium re-

19. Litteris perlectis Domitius dissimulans in consilio pronuntiat Pompeium celeriter subsidio venturum hortaturque eos, ne animo deficient quaeque usui ad defendendum oppidum sint parent. Ipse arcano cum paucis familiaribus suis colloquitur consiliumque fugae capere constituit. Cum vultus Domitii cum oratione non consentiret atque omnia trepidantius timidiusque ageret, quam superioribus diebus consuisset, multumque cum suis consiliandi causa secreto praeter consuetudinem colloqueretur, concilia conventusque hominum fugeret, res diutius tegi dissimularique non potuit. Pompeius enim rescripserat: sese rem in summum periculum deducturum non esse, neque suo consilio aut voluntate Domitium se in oppidum Corfinium contulisse; proinde, si qua fuisset facultas, ad se cum omnibus copiis veniret. Id ne fieri posset, obsidione atque oppidi circummunitione fiebat.

20. Divulgato Domitii consilio milites, qui erant Corfinii, primo vesperi secessionem faciunt atque ita inter se per tribunos militum centurionesque atque honestissimos sui generis colloquuntur; obsideri se a Caesar. opera munitionesque prope esse perfectas; ducem suum Domitium, cuius spe atque fiducia permanerint, proiectis omnibus fugae consilium capere: debere se suae salutis rationem habere. Ab his primo Marsi dissentire incipiunt eamque oppidi partem, quae munitissima videretur, occupant, tantaque inter eos dissensio existit, ut manum conserere atque armis dimicare conentur; post paulo tamen internuntiis ultrro citroque missis, quae ignorantabant, de L. Domitii fuga cognoscunt. Itaque omnes uno consilio Domitium productum in publicum circumstint et custodiunt legatosque ex suo numero ad Caesarem mittunt: sese paratos esse portas aperire quaeque imperaverit facere et L. Domitium vivum in eius potestatem tradere.

21. Quibus rebus cognitis Caesar etsi magni interesse arbitrabatur quam primum oppido potiri cohortesque ad se in castra traducere, ne qua aut largitionibus aut animi confirmatione aut falsis nuntiis commutatio fieret voluntatis, quod saepe in bello parvis momentis magni casus intercederent, tamen veritus, ne militum introitu et nocturni temporis licentia oppidum dirip-eretur, eos, qui venerant, collaudat atque in oppidum dimittit, portas murosque adservari iubet. Ipse in iis operibus, quae facere instituerat, milites dis-ponit non certis spatiis intermissis, ut erat superiorum dierum consuetudo, sed perpetuis vigiliiis statio-nibusque, ut contingant inter se atque omnem munitionem expleant; tribunos militum et praefectos circummittit atque hortatur, non solum ab eruptionibus caveant, sed etiam singulorum hominum occultos exitus adservent. Neque vero tam remisso ac languido animo quisquam omnium fuit, qui ea nocte conquieverit. Tanta erat summae rerum exspectatio, ut alius in aliam partem mente atque animo traheretur, quid ipsis Corfiniensiibus, quid Domitio, quid Lentulo, quid reliquis accideret, qui quosque eventus exciperent.

22. Quarta vigilia circiter Lentulus Spinther de muro cum vigiliiis custodibusque nostris colloquitur: velle, si sibi fiat potestas, Caesarem convenire. Facta potestate ex oppido mittitur, neque ab eo prius Domitianì milites discendunt, quam in conspectum Caesaris deducatur. Cum eo de salute sua agit: orat atque obscurat, ut sibi parcat, veteremque ami-citiam commemorat Caesarisque in se beneficia exponit: quae erant maxima: quod per eum in collegium pontificum venerat, quod provinciam Hispaniam ex praetura habuerat, quod in petitione consulatus erat sublevatus. Cuius orationem Caesar interpellat: se non maleficii causa ex provincia egressum, sed uti se a contumeliis inimicorum defendere t, ut tribunos plebis in ea re ex civitate expulsos in suam dignitatem restitueret, ut se et populum Romanum factione paucorum oppressum in libertatem vindicaret. Cuius oratione confirmatus Lentulus, ut in oppidum reverti liceat, petit: quod de sua salute impetraverit, fore etiam reliquis ad suam spem solatio; adeo esse perterritos nonnullos, ut suae vitae durius consulere cogantur. Facta potestate discedit.

23. Caesar, ubi luxit, omnes senatores senatorumque liberos, tribunos militum equitesque Romanos ad se produci iubet. Erant quinque ordinis senatorii, L. Domitius, P. Lentulus Spinther, L. Caecilius Rufus, Sex. Quinctilius Varus quaestor, L. Rubrius; praeterea filius Domitii alique complures adulescentes et magnus numeros equitum Romanorum et decurionum, quos ex municipiis Domitius evocaverat. Hos omnes productos a contumeliis militum conviciisque prohibit; paucapud eos loquitur, quod sibi a parte eorum gratia relata non sit pro suis in eos maximis beneficiis; dimittit omnes incolumes. HS. Lx, quod advexerat Domitius atque in publico deposuerat, allatum ad se a quattuorviris Corfiniensi bus Domitio reddit, ne continentior in vita hominum quam in pecunia fuisse videatur, etsi eam pecuniam publicam esse constabat datamque a Pompeio in stipendium.

Milites Domitianos sacramentum apud se dicere iubet atque eo die castra movet iustumque iter conficit VII omnino dies ad Corfinium commoratus et per fines Marrucinarum, Frentanorum, Larinatium in Apuliam pervenit.

24. Pompeius his rebus cognitis, quae erant ad Pompey goes to Corfinium gestae, Luceeria proficiscitur Canusium atque inde Brundisium. Copias undique omnes ex novis dilectibus ad se cogi iubet; servos, pastores armat atque iis equos attribuit; ex his circiter CCC equites conficit. L. Manlius praetor Alba cum cohortibus sex profugit, Rutilius Lupus praetor Tarracina cum tribus; quae procul equitatum Caesaris conspicatae, cui praerat Vibius Curius, relictto praetore signa ad Curium transferunt atque ad eum transeunt. Item reliquis itineribus nonnullae cohortes in agmen Caesaris, aliae in equites incidunt. Reducitur ad eum deprensus ex itinere N. Magius Cremona, praefectus fabrum Cn. Pompei. Quem Caesar ad eum remittit cum mandatis: quoniam ad id tempus facultas colloquendi non fuerit, atque ipse Brundisium sit venturus, interesse reipublicae et communis salutis, se cum Pompeio colloqui; neque vero idem profici, longo itineris spatio cum per alios condiciones ferantur, ac si coram de omnibus conditionibus disceptetur.
DE BELLO CIVILI COMM. I.

25. His datis mandatis Brundisium cum legionibus VI pervenit, veteranis III et reliquis, quas ex novo dilectu confecerat atque in itinere compleverat; Domitia- nas enim cohortes protinus a Corfinio in Siciliam miserat. Repperit consules Dyrrhachium profectos cum magna parte exercitus, Pompeium remanere Brundisii cum cohortibus viginti; neque certum inveniri poterat, obtinendine Brundisii causa ibi remansisset, quo facilius omne Hadriaticum mare extremis Italiae partibus regionibusque Graeciae in potestate haberet atque ex utraque parte bellum administrare posset, an inopia navium ibi restitisset; veritusque, ne ille Italian dimittendam non existimaret, exitus administrationesque Brundisini portus impedire instituit. Quorum operum haec erat ratio. Qua fauces erant angustissimae portus, moles atque aggerem ab utraque parte litoris iaciebat, quod his locis erat vadosum mare. Longius progressus, cum agger altiore aqua contineri non posset, rates duplices quoqueversus pedum XXX e regione molis collocabat. Has quaternis ancoris ex III angulis destinabat, ne fluctibus moverentur. His perfectis collocatisque alias deinceps pari magnitudine rates iungebat. Has terra atque aggere integebat, ne aditus atque incursus ad defendendum impediretur; a fronte atque ab utroque latere cratibus ac pluteis protegebat; in quarta quaque earum turres binorum tabulatorum excitabat, quo commodius, ab impetu navium incendiisque defenderet.
26. Contra haec Pompeius naves magnas onerarias, quas in portu Brundisino deprehenderat, adornabat. Ibi turres cum ternis tabulatis erigebat easque multis tormentis et omni genere telorum completas ad opera Caesaris appellebat, ut rates perrumperet atque opera disturbaret. Sic cotidie utrimque eminus fundis, sagittis reliquisque telis pugnabatur. Atque haec Caesar ita administrabat, ut condiciones pacis dimitendas non existimaret; ac tametsi magnopere admirabatur, Magium, quem ad Pompeium cum mandatis miserat, ad se non remitti, atque ea res saepe temptata etsi impetus eius consiliaque tardabat, tamen omnibus rebus in eo perseverandum putabat.

Itaque Caninium Rebilum legatum, familiarem necessariumque Scribonii Libonis, mittit ad eum colloquii causa. Mandat, ut Libonem de conciliandâ pace hortetur; imprimis, ut ipse cum Pompeio colloque-retur, postulat: magnopere sese confidere demonstrat, si eius rei sit potestas facta, fore, ut aequis condicionibus ab armis discedatur; cuius rei magnam partem laudis atque existimationis ad Libonem perventus, si illo auctore atque agente ab armis sit discessum. Libo a colloquio Caninii digressus ad Pompeium profugiscit tur. Paulo post renuntiat, quod consules absint, sine illis non posse agi de compositione. Ita saepeius rem frustra temptatam Caesar aliquando dimittendam sibi iudicat et de bello agendum.
27. Prope dimidia parte operis a Caesare effecta diebusque in ea re consumptis VIII naves a consulibus Dyrrhachio remissae, quae priorem partem exercitus eo de-portaverant, Brundisium revertuntur. Pompeius, sive 5 operibus Caesaris permotus sive etiam quod ab initio Italia excedere constituerat, adventu navium profectionem parare incipit et, quo facilius impetum Caesaris tardaret, ne sub ipsa profectione milites oppidum irrumperent, portas obstruit, vicos plate-asque inaedificat, fossas transversas viis praeducit atque ibi sudes stipitesque praeacutos defigit. Haec levibus cratibus terraque inaequat; aditus autem atque itinera duo, quae extra murum ad portum ferebant, maximis defixis trabibus atque iis praeacutis praeseptit. His paratis rebus milites silentio naves conscendere iubet, expeditos autem ex evocatis, sagittariis funditoriibusque raros in muro turribusque disponit. Hos certo signo revocare constituit, cum omnes milites naves conscendissent, atque iis expedito loco actuaria navigia relinquit.

28. Brundisini Pompeianorum militum iniuriiis atque ipsius Pompei contumeliis permoti Caesaris rebus favebant. Itaque cognita Pompei profectione concursabantibus illis atque in ea re occupatis vulgo ex tectis significabant. Per quos re cognita Caesar scalas parari militesque armari iubet, ne quam rei gerendae facultatem dimittat. Pompeius sub noctem naves solvit. Qui erant in muro custodiae causa collocati, eo signo, quod con-venerat, revocantur notisque itineribus ad naves decurrunt. Milites positis scalis muros ascendunt, ved moniti a Brundisinis, ut vallum caecum fossasque caveant, sub:stant et longo itinere ab his circumducti ad portum perveniunt duasque naves cum militibus, quae ad moles Caesaris adhaeserant, scaphis lintribusque reprehendunt, reprehensas excipiunt.

29. Caesar, etsi ad spem conficiendi negotii maxime probabat coactis navibus mare leaving Caesar without means of pursuit.
transire et Pompeium sequi, priusquam ille sese transmarinis auxiliis confirmaret, tamen eius rei moram temporisque longinquitatem timebat, quod omnibus coactis navibus Pompeius praesentem facultatem inequenti sui ade-merat. Relinquebatur, ut ex longinquioribus regionibus Galliae Picenique et a freto naves essent ex-spectandae. Id propter anni tempus longum atque impeditum videbatur. Interea veteran exercitum, duas Hispanias confirmari, quarum erat altera maximis beneficiis Pompei devineta, auxilia, equitatum parari, Galliam Italiamque temptari se absente nolebat.

30. Itaque in praesentia Pompei sequendi ratioomnia imperat, ut naves conquirant Brundisiumque deducendas curent. Mittit in Sardiniam cum legione una Valerium legatum, in

31. Nacti vacuas ab imperiiis Sardiniam Valerius, Curio Siciliam cum exercitibus eo perveniunt. Tubero, cum in Africam venisset, invenit in provincia cum imperio Attium Varum; qui ad Auximum, ut supra demonstravimus, amissis cohortibus protinus ex fuga in Africam pervenerat atque eam sua sponte vacuam occupaverat dilectuque habito duas legiones effecerat, hominum et locorum notitia et usu eius provinciae nactus aditus ad ea conanda, quod paucis ante annis ex praetura cam provinciam obtinuerat. Hicvenientem Uticam navibus Tuberonem portu atque oppido prohibet neque affectum valetudine filium exponere in terra patitur, sed sublatis ancoris excedere eo loco cogit.

32. His rebus conferatis Caesar, ut reliquum tempus a labore intermitteretur, milites in proxima municipia deducit; ipse ad urbem prolociscitur. Coacto senatu 5 iniurias inimicorum commemorat. Docet se nullum extraordinarium honorem appetisse, sed exspectato legitimo tempore consulatus eo fuisse contentum, quod omnibus civibus pateret. Latum ab x tribunis plebis contradicentibus inimicis, Catone vero acerrime 10 repugnante et pristina consuetudine dicendi mora dies extrahente, ut sui ratio absentis haberetur, ipso consule Pompeio; qui si improbasset, cur ferri passus esset? si probasset, cur se uti populi beneficio prohibuisset? Patientiam proponit suam, cum de exercitibus dimittendis ultro postulavisset; in quo iacturam dignitatis atque honoris ipse facturus esset. Acerbitatem inimicorum docet, qui, quod ab altero postularent, in se recusarent atque omnia permisceri mallent, quam imperium exercitusque dimittere. In- 15 iuriam in eripiendis legionibus praedicat, crudelitatem et insolentiam in circumscibendis tribunis plebis; condiciones a se latas, expetita colloquia et denegata commemorat. Pro quibus rebus hortatur ac postulat, ut rempublicam suscipiant atque una secum administrent. Sin timore defugiant, illis se oneri non futurum et per se rempublicam administraturum. Legatos ad Pompeium de compositione mitti oportere, neque se reformidare, quod in senatu Pompeius paulo ante dixisset, ad quos legati mitterentur, his auctoritatem attribui timoremque eorum, qui mitterent, signi cari. Tenuis atque infirmi haec animi videri. Se vero, ut operibus anteire studuerit, sic iustitia et aequitate velle superare.

33. Probat rem senatus de mittendis legatis; sed, qui mitterentur, non reperiebantur, maximeque timoris causa pro se quisque id munus legationis recusabat. Pompeius enim discedens ab urbe in senatu dixerat, eodem se habiturum loco, qui Romae remansissent et qui in castris Caesaris fuissent. Sic triduum disputationibus excusationibusque extrahitur. Subicitur etiam L. Metellus, tribunus plebis, ab inimicis Caesaris, qui hanc rem distrahat reliquasque res, quascumque agere instituerit, impediat. Cuius cognito consilio Caesar frustra diebus aliquot consumptis, nec reliquum tempus dimittat, infectis iis, quae agere destinaverat, ab urbe proficiscitur atque in ulteriori Galliam pervenit.

34. Quo cum venisset, cognoscit missum a Pompeio Vibullium Rufum, quem paucis ante diebus Corfinio captum ipse dimiserat; profectum item Domitium ad occupandam Massiliam navibus actuariis septem, quas Igilii et in Cosano a privatis coactas servis, libertis, colonis suis compleverat; praemissos etiam legatos Massilienses domum, nobiles adolescentes, quos ab urbe discoedens Pompeius erat adhortatus, ne nova Caesaris officia veterum suorum beneficiorum in eos memoriam expellerent. Quibus mandatis acceptis Massilienses portas Caesari clauserant; Albicos, barbaros homines, qui in eorum fide antiquitus erant montesque supra Massiliam incoebant, ad se vocaverant; frumentum ex finitimis regionibus atque omnibus castellis in urbem convexerant; armorum officinas in urbe instiuerant; muros, portas, classem reficiabant.

auxerit. Quare paribus eorum beneficiis parem se quoque voluntatem tribuere debere et neutrum eorum contra alterum iuvare aut urbe aut portibus recipere.

36. Haec dum inter eos aguntur, Domitius navibus Massiliam pervenit atque ab iis receptus urbi praeficitur: summa ei belli administrandi permittitur. Eius imperio classem quoqueversus dimittunt: onerarias 5 naves, quas ubique possunt, deprehendunt atque in portum deducunt, parum clavis aut materia atque armamentis instructis ad reliquas armandas reficiendasque utuntur; frumenti quod inventum est in publicum conferunt; reliquas merces commeatusque ad obsidionem urbais, si accidat, reservant. Quibus iniuriis permotus Caesar legiones tres Massiliam adducit; turres vineasque ad oppugnationem urbis agere, naves longas Arelate numero duodecim facere instituit. Quibus effectis armatisque diebus xxx, 15 a qua die materia caesa est, adductisque Massiliam, iis D. Brutum praeficit; C. Trebonium legatum ad oppugnationem Massiliae relinquit.

37. Dum haec parat atque administrat, C. Fabium legatum cum legionibus tribus, quas Narbone circumque ea loca hiemandi causa disposuerat, in Hispaniam praemittit celeriterque saltus Pyrenaeos occupari iubet, 5 qui eo tempore ab L. Afranio legato praesidiis tenebantur. Reliquas legiones, quae longius hiemabant, subsequi iubet. Fabius, ut erat imperatum, adhibita celeritate praesidium ex saltu deiecit magnisque itineribus ad exercitum Afranii contendit.

38. Adventu L. Vibullii Rudi, quem a Pompeio missum in Hispaniam demonstratum est, Afranius et Petreius et Varro, legati Pompei, quorum unus Hispaniam citeriorem tribus legionibus, alter ulteriorem a saltu Castulonensi ad Anam duabus legionibus, tertius ab Ana Vettonum agrum Lusitaniamque pari numero legionum obtinebat, officia inter se partiiuntur, uti Petreius ex Lusitania per Vettones cum omnibus copiis ad Afranium proficiscatur, Varro cum iis, quas habebat, legionibus omnem ulteriorem Hispaniam tueatur. His rebus constitutis equites auxiliaque toti Lusitaniae a Petreio, Celtiberiae, Cantabris barbarisque omnibus, qui ad Oceanum pertinent, ab Afranio imperantur. Quibus coactis celeriter Petreius per Vettones ad Afranium pervenit constituintque communi consilio bellum ad Ilerdam propter ipsius loci opportunitatem gerere.

39. Erant, ut supra demonstratum est, legiones Afranii tres, Petrei duae, praeterea scutatae citerioris provinciae et cetratae ulterioris Hispaniae cohortes circiter LXXX equitumque utriusque provinciae circiter V milia. Caesar legiones in Hispaniam praemiserat VI, auxilia peditum ... milia, equitum III milia, quae omnibus superioribus bellis habuerat, et parem ex Gallia numerum, quam ipse pacaverat, nominatim ex omnibus civitatibus nobilissimo quoque evocato, 10

pecunias sumpsit; has exercitui distribuit. Quo facto duas res consecutus est, quod pignore animos centurionum devinxit et largitione militum voluntates redemit.

40. Fabius finitimarum civitatum animos litteris nuntiisque temptabat. In Sicori flumine  Fabius nearly pontes effecerat duos distantes inter se milia passuum quattuor. His pontibus pabulatum mittebat, quod ea, quae citra flumen 5 fuerant, superioribus diebus consumpserat. Hoc idem fere atque eadem de causa Pompeiani exer-citus duces faciebant, crebroque inter se equestris proeliis contendebant. Huc cum cotidiana consue-tudine egressis pabulatoribus praesidio propiore ponte 10 legiones Fabianae duae flumen transissent impedimentaque et omnis equitatus sequetur, subito vi ventorum et aquae magnitudine pons est interruptus et reliqua multitudo equitum interclusa. Quo cognito a Petreio et Afranio ex aggere atque crati-15 bus, quae flumine ferebantur, celeriter suo ponte Afranius, quem oppido castrisque coniunctum habebat, legiones IIII equitatumque omnem traiecit duabusque Fabianis occurrit legionibus. Cuius adventu nuntiato L. Plancus, qui legionibus praeerat, necessaria re coactus locum capit superiorem diversamque aciem in duas partes constituit, ne ab equitatu circumveniri posset. Ita congressus impari numero magnos impetus legionum equitatus-que sustinet. Commissio ab equitibus proelio signa legionum duarum procul ab utrisque conspiciuntur, quas C. Fabius ulteriore ponte subsidio nostris miserat suspicatus fore id, quod accidit, ut duces adversariorum occasione et beneficio fortunae ad nostros opprimendos uterentur. Quarum adventu proelium dirimitur ac suas uterque legiones reducit in castra.

41. Eo biduo Caesar cum equitibus DCCC, quos Caesar joinshim, and advances up to the enemy's position, sibi praesidio reliquerat, in castra pervenit. Pons, qui fuerat tempestate interruptus, paene erat refectus: hunc noctu perfici iussit. Ipse cognita locorum natura ponti castrisque praesidio sex cohortes relinquit atque omnia impedimenta et postero die omnibus copiis, triplici instructa acie ad Ilerdam proficiscitur et sub castris Afranii consistit et ibi paulisper sub armis moratus facit aequo loco pugnandi potestatem. Potestate facta Afranius copias educit et in medio colle sub castris constituit. Caesar ubi cognovit per Afranium stare, quominus proelio dimicaretur, ab infinis radicibus montis intermissis circiter passibus CCC castra facere constituit et, ne in opere faciendo milites repentino hostium incursu exterrerentur atque opere prohiberentur, vallo muniri vetuit, quod eminere et procul videri necesse erat, sed a fronte contra hostem pedum quindecim fossam fieri iussit. Prima et secunda acies in armis, ut ab initio constituta erat, permanebat; post has opus in occulto a tertia acie fiebat. Sic omne prius est perfectum, quam intellegaretur ab Afranio castra muniri. Sub vesperum Caesar intra hanc fossam legiones reducit atque ibi sub armis proxima nox concedescit.

42. Postero die omnem exercitum intra fossam continet et, quod longius erat agger where he fortifi- petendus, in praesentia similem ratio- nem operis instituit singulaque latera castrorum singulis attribuit legionibus munienda fossasque ad eandem magnitudinem perfici iubet; reliquas legiones in armis expeditas contra hostem consti- tuit. Afranius Petreiusque terrendi causa atque operis impediendi copias suas ad infimas montis radices producunt et proelio lacesunt; neque idcirco Caesar opus intermittit, confisus praesidio legionum trium et munitione fossae. Illi non diu commorati nec longius ab infimo colle progressi copias in castra reducunt. Tertio die Caesar vallo castra com- munit; reliquas cohortes, quas in superioribus castris reliquerat, impedimentaque ad se traduci iubet.

43. Erat inter oppidum Ilerdam et proximum collem, ubi castra Petreius atque Afranius habebant, planitia circiter passuum CCC atque in hoc fere medio spatio tumulus erat paulo editior; quem si occupavisset Caesar et communisset, ab oppido et ponte et commenatu omni, quem in oppidum contulerant, se interclusurum adversarios confidebat. Hoc sperans legiones tres ex castris educit acieque in locis idoneis instructa unius legionis antesignanos procurrere atque eum tumulum occupare iubet. Qua re cognita celeriter quae in statione pro castris erant Afranii cohortes breviore itinere ad eundem occupandum locum mittuntur. Contenditur proelio et, quod prius in tumulum Afraniani venerant, nostri repelluntur atque aliis submissis subsidiis terga vertere seque ad signa legionum recipere coguntur.

44. Genus erat pugnae militum illorum, ut Caesar’s troops are confused by the enemy’s tactics, magno impetu primo procurrerent, aut dacter locum caperent, ordines suos non magnopere servarent, rari dispersique pugnarent; si premerentur, pedem referre et loco excedere non turpe existimarent, cum Lusitanis reliquisque barbaris barbaro genere quodam pugnae assuefacti; quod fere fit, quibus quisque in locis miles inveteraverit, ut multum earum regionum consuetudine moveatur. Haec tum ratio nostros perturbavit insuetos huius generis pugnae; circum iri enim sese ab aperto latere procurentibus singulis arbitrabantur; ipsi autem suos ordines servare neque ab signis discedere neque sine gravi causa eum locum, quem ceperant, dimitti censuerant oportere. Itaque perturbatis antesignanis legio, quae in eo cornu constiterat, locum non tenuit atque in proximum collem sese recepit.

45. Caesar paene omni acie perterrita, quod praeter opinionem consuetudinemque acciderat, cohortatus suos legionem nonam subsidio ducit; hostem insolenter atque acriter nostros insequentem supprimit 5 rursusque terga vertere seque ad oppidum Ilerdam recipere et sub muro consistere cogit. Sed nonae legionis milites elati studio, dum sarcire acceptum detrimentum volunt, temere insecuti longius fugientes, in locum iniquum progrediuntur et sub montem, in quo erat oppidum positum Ilerda, succedunt. Hinc se recipere cum vellunt, rursus illi ex loco superiore nostros premebant. Praeruptus locus erat, utraque ex parte dextus ac tantum in latitudinem patebat, ut tres instructae cohortes eum locum explerent, ut neque subsidia ab lateribus submitti neque equites laborantibus usui esse possent. Ab oppido autem declivis locus leni fastigio vergebat in longitudinem passuum circiter 4000. Hac nostris erat receptus, quod eo incitati studio inconsultius processerant; hoc pugnabatur loco et propter angustias iniquo et quod sub ipsis radicibus montis constiterant, ut nullum frustra telum in eos mitteretur. Tamen virtute et patientia nitebantur atque omnia vulnera sustinebant. Augebantur illis copiae, atque ex castris cohortes per oppidum crebro submittebantur, ut integri defessis succeederent. Hoc idem Caesar facere cogebatur, ut submissis in eundem locum cohortibus defossos recipieret.

46. Hoc cum esset modo pugnatum continenter horis quinque nostrique gravius a multitudine premerentur, consumptis omnibus telis, gladiis destrictis impetum adversus montem in cohortes faciunt paucisque deiectis reliquis sese convertere cogunt. Submotis sub murum cohortibus ac nonnulla parte propter terrem in oppidum compulsis facilis est nostris receptus datus. Equitatus autem ab utroque latere, etsi deiectis atque inferioribus locis constiterat, tamen summa in ingum virtute conititur atque inter duas acies perequitans commodiorem ac tuto- rem nostris receptum dat. Ita vario certamine pugnatum est. Nostri in primo congressu circiter LXX ceciderunt, in his Q. Fulginius ex primo hastato legionis XIII, qui propter eximiam virtutem ex inferioribus ordinibus in eum locum pervenerat; vulnerantur amplius DC. Ex Afranianis interficiuntur T. Caecilius, primi pili centurio, et praeter eum centuriones III, milites amplius CC.

47. Sed haec eius diei praeferitur opinio, ut se utrique superiores discessisse existimarent: Afraniani, quod, cum esse omnium iudicio inferiores viderentur, comminus tam diu stetissent et nostrorum impetum sustinuissent et ab initio locum tumulumque tenuissent, quae causa pugnandi fuerat, et nostros primo congressu terga vertere coegissent; nostri autem, quod iniquo loco atque impari congressi numero quinque horis proelium sustinuissent, quod montem gladiis destrictis ascenderissent, quod ex loco superiore terga vertere adversarios coegissent atque in oppidum compulissent. Illi eum tumulum, pro quo pugnatum est, magnis operibus muniverunt praesidiumque ibi posuerunt.

48. Accidit etiam repentinum incommodum biduo, quo haec gesta sunt. Tanta enim tempestas cooritur, ut numquam illis locis maiores aquas fuisset constaret. Tum autem ex omnibus montibus nives pro-luit ac summas ripas fluminis superavit pontesque ambo, quos C. Fabius fecerat, uno die interruptit. Quae res magnas difficultates exercitui Caesaris attulit. Castra enim, ut supra demonstratum est, cum essent inter flumina duo, Sicorim et Cingam, 10 spatio milium XXX, neutrum horum transiri poterat, necessarioque omnes his angustiis continebantur. Neque civitates, quae ad Caesaris amicitiam accesserant, frumentum supportare, neque ii, qui pabulatum longius progressi erant, interclusi fluminibus reverti, 15 neque maximi commeatus, qui ex Italia Galliaque veniebant, in castra pervenire poterant. Tempus erat autem difficillimum, quo neque frumenta in acervis erant neque multum a maturitate aberant; et civitates exinanitae, quod Afranius paene omne frumentum ante Caesaris adventum Ilerdam convexerat, reliqui si quid fuerat, Caesar superioribus diebus con-sumpserat; pecora, quod secundum poterat esse inopiae subsidium, propter bellum finitimae civitates 25 longius removerant. Qui erant pabulandi aut frumen-tandi causa progressi, hos levis armaturae Lusitani peritique earum regionum cetrati citerioris Hispaniae consectabantur; quibus erat proclive tranare flumen, quod consuetudo eorum omnium est, ut sine utribus 30 ad exercitum non eant.

49. At exercitus Afranii omnium rerum abundabat copia. Multum erat frumentum provisum et convectum superioribus temporibus, multum ex omni provincia comportabatur;
5 magna copia pabuli suppetebat. Harum omnium rerum facultates sine ullo periculo pons Ilerdae praebebat et loca trans flumen integra, quo omnino Caesar adire non poterat.

50. Hae permanserunt aquae dies complures.
Conatus est Caesar reficere pontes; sed Caesar cannot rebuid the bridges.
neque ad ripam dispositae cohortes 5 adversariorum perfici patiebantur; quod illis prohi-bere erat facile cum ipsius fluminis natura atque aquae magnitudine, tum quod ex totis ripis in unum atque angustum locum tela iaciebantur; atque erat difficile eodem tempore rapidissimo flumine opera perficere et tela vitare.

51. Nuntiatur Afranio magnos commeatus, qui iter habeant ad Caesarem, ad flumen constitisse.
Venerant eo sagittarii ex Rutenis, equites ex Gallia cum multis carris magnisque impedimentis, ut fert Gallica consuetudine. Erant praeterea cuiusque generis hominum milia circiter VI cum servis liberisque; sed nullus ordo, nullum imperium certum, cum suo quique consilio uteretur atque omnes sine timore iter facerent usi superiorum temporum atque itinerum licentia. Erant complures honesti adulescentes, senatorum filii et ordinis equestris: erant legationes civitatum; erant legati Caesaris. Hos omnes flumina continebant. Ad hos opprimendos cum omni equitatu tribusque legionibus Afranius de nocte proficiscitur imprudentesque ante missis equitibus aggreditur. Celeriter sese tamen Galli equites expediunt proeliumque committunt. Ii, dum pari certamine res geri potuit, magnum hostium numerum pauci sustinuere; sed, ubi signa legionum appropinquare coeperunt, paucis amissis sese in proximos montes conferunt. Hoc pugnae tempus magnum attulit nostris ad salutem momentum; nacti enim spatium se in loca superiorea receperunt. Desiderati sunt eo die sagittarii circiter CC, equites pauci, calonum atque impedimentorum non magnus numerus.

52. His tamen omnibus annona crevit; quae fere res non solum inopia praesenti, sed etiam futuri temporis timore ingravescere consuevit. Iamque ad denarios L in singulos modios annona pervenerat, et militum 5 vires inopia frumenti deminuerat, atque incommoda in dies augebantur; ita paucis diebus magna erat rerum facta commutatio ac se fortuna inclinaverat, ut nostri magna inopia necessariarum rerum conflictar-entur, illi omnibus abundarent rebus superioresque haberentur. Caesar iis civitatibus, quae ad eius amicitiam accesserant, quod minor erat frumenti copia, pecus imperabat; calones ad longinquiores civitates dimittebat; ipse praesentem inopiam quibus poterat subsidiis tutabatur.

54. Cum in his angustiis res esset, atque omnes viae ab Afraniis militibus equiti-busque obsiderentur, nec pontes perfici possent, imperat militibus Caesar, ut naves faciant, cuius generis eum superioribus annis usus Britanniae docuerat. Carinae ac prima statumina ex levi materia fiebant; reliquam corpus navium viminibus contextum coriis intege-batur. Has perfectas carris iunctis debehit noctu milia passuum a castris XXII militesque his navibus flumen transportat continentemque ripae collem improviso occupat. Hunc celeriter, priusquam ab adversariis sentiatur, communit. Huc legionem postea traiicit atque ex utraque parte pontem institutum biduo perficit. Ita commenatus et qui frumenti causa processerant tuto ad se recipit et rem frumentarium expedire incipit.

55. Eodem die equitum magnam partem flumen traecit. Qui inopinantes pabulatores et magnam numerum iumentorum atque hominum intercipiunt, cohortibusque cetratis subsidio missis scienter in duas partes sese distribuunt, alii ut praedae praesidio sint, alii ut venientibus resistant atque eos propellant, unamque cohortem, quae tamen ante ceteras extra aciem procurrerat, seclusam ab reliquis circumveniunt atque interficiunt incolumesque cum magna praeda eodem ponte in castra revertuntur.

56. Dum haec ad Ilerdam geruntur, Massilienses usi L. Domitii consilio naves longas expediunt numero XVII, quarum erant XI tectae. Multa huc minora navigia addunt, ut ipsa multitudine nostra classis terreatur. 5 Magnum numerum sagittariorum, magnum Albicorum, de quibus supra demonstratum est, imponunt atque hos praemiis polllicitationibusque incitant. Certas sibi deposcit naves Domitius atque has colonis pastoribusque, quos secum adduxerat, complet. Sic omnibus rebus instructa classe magna fiducia ad nostras naves procedunt, quibus praeerat D. Brutus. Hae ad insulam, quae est contra Massiliam, stationes obtinebant.

57. Erat multo inferior numero navium Brutus; and of Caesar's admiral Brutus. Close engagement.
sed electos ex omnibus legionibus fortissimos viros, antesignanos, centuriones, Caesar ei classi attribuerat, qui sibi id munera se depoposcerant. Hi manus ferreas atque harpagoes paraverant magnaque numero pilorum, tragularum reliquorumque telorum se instruxerant. Ita cognito hostium adventu suas naves ex portu educunt, cum Massiliensibus confligunt. Pugnatum est utrimque fortissime atque acerreme; neque multum Albici nostris virtute cedebant, homines asperi et montani et exercitati in armis; atque hi modo digressi a Massiliensibus recentem eorum pollitationem animis continebant, pastoresque Domitii spe libertatis excitati sub oculis domini suam probare operam studebant.

58. Ipsi Massilienses et celeritate navium et scientia gubernatorum confisi nostros eludebant impetusque eorum non excipiebant et, quoad licebat latiore uti spatio, producta longius acie circumvenire nostros aut pluribus navibus adoriri singulas aut remos transcurentes detergere, si possent, contendsbant; cum propius erat necessario ventum, ab scientia gubernatorum atque artificiis ad virtutem montanorum confugiebant. Nostri cum minus exercitatis remigibus minusque 10 peritis gubernatoribus utebantur, qui repente ex onerariis navibus erant producti neque dum etiam vocabulis armamentorum cognitis, tum etiam tardi- tate et gravitate navium impediebantur; factae enim subito ex humida materia non eundem usum 15 celeritatis habebant. Itaque, dum locus comminus pugnandi daretur, aequo animo singulas binis navibus obiciebant atque iniecta manu ferrea et retenta utraque nave diversi pugnabat atque in hostium naves transcendebant et magno numero Albicorum 20 et pastorum interfecto partem navium deprimunt, nonnullas cum hominibus capiunt, reliquas in portum compellunt. Eo die naves Massiliensium cum iis, quae sunt captae, intereunt VIII.

60. Interim Oscenses et Calagurritani, qui erant cum Oscensibus contributi, mittunt ad eum legatos sesque imperata facturos pollicentur. Hos Tarraconenses et Iacetani et Ausetani et paucis post diebus Illurgavonenses, qui flumen Hiberum attingunt, inequentur. Petit ab his omnibus, ut se frumento iuvent. Pollicentur atque omnibus undique conquisitis iumentis in castra deportant. Transit etiam cohors Illurgavonensis ad eum cognito civitatis consilio et signa ex statione transfert. Magna celeriter commutatio rerum. Perfecto ponte, magnis quinque civitatibus ad amicitiam adiunctis, expedita re frumentaria, extinctis rumoribus de auxiliis legionum, quae cum Pompeio per Mauretaniam venire dicebantur, multae longinquiores civitates ab Afranio desciscunt et Caesar amicitiam sequuntur.

61. Quibus rebus perterritis animis adversariorum Caesar, ne semper magno circuitu per pontem equitatus esset mittendus, nactus idoneum locum, fossas pedum xxx in latitudinem complures facere instituit, quibus partem aliquam Sicoris averteret vadumque in eo flumine efficeret. His paene effectis magnum in timorem Afranius Petreiusque perveniant, ne omnino frumento pabuloque intercluderentur, quod multum Caesar equitatu valebat. Itaque constituunt ipsi locis iis excedere et in Celtiberiam bellum transferre. Huic consilio suffragabatur etiam illa res, quod ex duobus contrariis generibus, quae superiore bello cum Sertorio steterant civitates, victae nomen atque imperium absentis Pompei timebant, quae in amicitia manserant, magnis affectae beneficiis eum diligebant; Caesaris autem erat in barbaris nomen obscurius. Hic magnos equitatus magnaque auxilia exspectabat et suis locis bellum in hiemem ducere cogitabat. Hoc initio consilio toto flumine Hibero naves conquerere et Octogesam adduci iubent. Id erat oppidum positum ad Hiberum miliaque passuum a castris aberat. Ad eum locum fluminis navibus iunctis pontem imperant fierant ferior legionesque duas flumen Sicorim traducunt; castra muniuntur.

62. Qua re per exploratores cognita, summo labore militum Caesar continuato diem nocemque opere in flumine avertendo huc iam redixerat rem, ut equites, etsi difficulter atque aegre fiebat, possent tamen atque auderent flumen transire, pedites vero tantummodo humeris ac summo pectore existarent et cum altitudine aquae tum etiam rapiditate fluminis ad transeundum impedirentur. Sed tamen eodem fere tempore pons in Hibero prope effectus nuntiabatur et in Sicori vadum reperiebatur.

63. Iam vero eo magis illi maturandum iter existimabat. Itaque duabus auxiliaribus cohortibus Ilerdae praesidio relictis omnibus copiis Sicorim transcut et cum duabus legionibus, quas superioribus diebus traduxerant, castra coniungunt. Relinquebatur Caesari nihil, nisi uti equitatu agmen adversariorum male haberet et carperet. Pons enim ipsius magnum circuitum habebat, ut muito breviore itinere illi ad Hiberum pervenire possent. Equites ab eo missi flumen transeunt et, cum de tertia vigilia Petreius atque Afranius castra movissent, repente sese ad novissimum agmen ostendunt et magna multitudine circumfusa morari atque iter impedire incipiunt.

64. Prima luce ex superioribus locis, quae Caesaris castris erant coniuncta, cernebatur pursed by Caesar's horse. His legions volunteer to ford the river, equitatus nostri proelio novissimos illorum premi vehementer ac nonnumquam sustinere extremum agmen atque interrupi, alias inferri signa et universarum cohortium impetu nostros propelli, dein rursus conversos insequi. Totis vero castris milites circulari et dolere hostem ex manibus dimitti, bellum necessario longius duci; centurionesque tribunosque militum adire atque obsecurare, ut per eos Caesar certior fieret, ne labori suo neu periculo parceret: paratos esse sese, posse et audere ea transire flumen, qua traductus esset equitatus. Quorum studio et vocibus excitatus Caesar, etsi timebat tantae magnitudini fluminis exercitum obicere, conandum tamen atque experientum iudicat. Itaque infirmiores milites ex omnibus centuriis deligi iubet, quorum aut animus aut vires videbantur sustinere non posse. Hos cum legione una praesidio castris relinquit; reliquas legiones expeditas educit magnoque numero iumentorum in flumine supra atque infra constituto traducit exercitum. Pauci ex his militibus ablati flumine ab equitatu excipiuntur ac sublevantur; interit tamen nemo. Traducto incolumi exercitu copias instruit tripliemque aciem ducere incipit. Ac tantum fuit in militibus studii, ut milium sex ad iter addito circuitu magnaque fluminis mora interposita eos, qui de tertia vigilia exissent, ante horam diei nonam consequerentur.

66. Media circiter nocte iis, qui aquandi causa longius a castris processerant, ab equitibus correptis, fit ab his certior Caesar, duces adversariorum silentio copias castris educere. Quo cognito signum dari iubet et vasa militari more conclamari. Illi exaudito clamore veriti, ne noctu impediti sub onere conqligere cogere rentur aut ne ab equitatu Caesaris in angustiis tene rentur, iter supprimunt copiasque in castris continent.
10 Postero die Petreius cum paucis equitibus occulte ad exploranda loca proficiscitur. Hoc idem fit ex castris Caesaris: mittitur L. Decidius Saxa cum paucis, qui loci naturam perspiciat. Uterque idem suis renun tiat: quinque milia passuum proxima intercedere 15 itineris campestris, inde excipere loca aspera et montuosa; qui prior has angustias occupaverit, ab hoc hostem prohiberi nihil esse negotii.

67. Disputatur in consilio a Petreio atque Afranio and resolves to march by day.
que censebant, ut noctu iter facerent: posse prius ad angustias veniri, quam sentiretur.
5 Alii, quod pridie noctu conqlamatum esset in Caesaris castris, argumenti sumebant loco non posse clam exiri. Circumfundit noctu equitatum Caesaris atque omnia loca atque itinera obsidere; nocturnaque proelia esse vitanda, quod perterritus miles in civili dissensione timori magis quam religioni consulere consuerit. At luce multum posse pudorem omnium oculis, metum etiam tribunorum militum et centurio num praesentiam afferre; quibus rebus coerceri milites et in officio contineri soleant. Quare omni 10 ratione esse interdiu perrumpendum: etsi aliquo acepto detrimento, tamen summa exercitus salva locum, quem petant, capi posse. Haec vincit in consilio sententia, et prima luce postridie constituunt proficisci.

68. Caesar exploratis regionibus albente caelo omnes copias castris educit magnoque circuitu nullo certo itinere exercitum ducit. Nam quae itinera ad Hiberum et atque Octogesam pertinebant, castris hostium oppositis tenebantur. Ipsi erant transcendentae valles maximeae ac difficillimae, saxa multis locis praerupta iter impediebant, ut arma per manus necessario traderentur militesque inermes sublevatique alii ab aliiis magnam partem itineris conficerent. Sed hunc laborem recusabat nemo, quod eum omnium laborum finem fore existimabant, si hostem Hiber intercludere et frumento prohibere potuissent.

69. Ac primo Afraniani milites visendi causa laeti ex castris procurrebant contumeliosisque vocibus prosequebantur nostros: necessarii victus inopia coactos fugere atque ad Ilerdam reverti. Erat enim iter a proposito diversum, contrariumque in partem iri videbatur. Duces vero eorum consilium suum laudibus efferebant, quod se castris tenuissent; multumque eorum opinionem adiuvabat, quod sine iumentis impedimentisque ab Ilerda prefectos videbant, ut non posse inopiam diutius sustinere confiderent. Sed, ubi paulatim retorqueri agmen ad dextram conspexerunt iamque primos superare regionem castrorum animum adverterunt, nemo erat adeo tardus aut 15 fugiens laboris, quin statim castris exeundum atque occurrentum putaret. Conclamatur ad arma, atque omnes copiae paucis praesidio relictis co-hortibus exeunt rectoque ad Hiberum itinere con-tendunt.

70. Erat in celeritate omne positum certamen, utri prius angustias montesque occuparent: sed exercitum Caesaris viarum difficultates tardabant, Afranii copias equitatus Caesaris insequens morabatur.

Res tamen ab Afranianis huc erat necessario deducta, ut, si prioris montes, quos petebant, attigissent, ipsi periculum vitarent, impedimenta totius exercitus cohortesque in castris relictas servare non possent; quibus intercluisis exercitu Caesaris auxilium ferri nulla ratione poterat. Con-fecit prior iter Caesar atque ex magnis rupibus nactus planitiem in hac contra hostem aciem instruit. Afranius, cum ab equitatu novissimum agmen premeretur, ante se hostem videret, collem quendam nactus ibi constitit. Ex eo loco III cetratorum cohortes in montem, qui erat in conspectu omnium excelsissimus, mittit. Hunc magno cursu concitatos iubet occupare, eo consilio, uti ipse eodem omnibus copiis contenderet et mutato itinere iugis Octogesam perveniret. Hunc cum obliquo itinere cetrati peterent, conspicatus equi-tatus Caesaris in cohortes impetum facit; nec minimam partem temporis equitum vim cetrati sustinere potuerunt omnesque ab iis circumventi in conspectu utriusque exercitus interficiuntur.

72. Caesar in eam spem venerat, se sine pugna et sine vulnere suorum rem conficere posse, quod re frumentaria adversarios interclusisset. Cur etiam secundo proelio aliquos ex suis amitteret? cur vulnerari pateretur optime meritos de se milites? cur denique fortunam periclitaretur? praesertim cum non minus esset imperatoris consilio superare quam gladio. Movebatur etiam misericordia civium, quos interficiendos videbat: quibus salvis atque incolumibus rem obtinere malebat. Hoc consilium Caesaris plerisque non probabatur; milites vero palam inter se loquebantur, quoniam talis occasio victoriae dimitteretur, etiam cum vellet Caesar, sese non esse pugnaturos. Ille in sua sententia perseverat et paulum ex eo loco degreditur, ut timorem adversariis minuat. Petreius atque Afranius oblata facultate in castra sese referunt. Caesar praesidiis in montibus dispositis omni ad Hiberum intercluso itinere quam proxime potest hostium castris castra communit.

73. Postero die duces adversariorum perturbati, quod omnem rei frumentariae fluminis-que Hiberi spem dimiserant, de reliquis rebus consultabant. Erat unum iter, Ilerdam si reverti vellent; alterum, si Tarraconem peterent. Haec consiliantibus iis nuntiantur aquatores ab equitatu premi nostro. Qua re cognita crebras stationes disponunt equitum et cohortium aliarum legionariaeque intericiunt cohortes vallumque ex castris ad aquam ducere incipiunt, ut intra munitionem et sine timore et sine stationibus aquari possent. Id opus inter se Petreius atque Afranius partiantur ipsique perficiendi operis causa longius progrediuntur.

74. Quorum discessu liberam nacti milites collo-quirorum facultatem vulgo procedunt, et quem quisque in castris notum aut municipem habebat conquirit atque evocat. Primum agunt gratias omnes omnibus, quod sibi perterritis pridie pepercissent: eorum se beneficio vivere. Deinde imperatoris fidem quaeunt, rectene se illi sint commissuri, et quod non ab initio fecerint armaque cum hominibus necessariis et consanguineis contulerint queruntur. His provocati sermonibus fidem ab imperatore de Petrei atque Afranii vita petunt, ne quod in se scelus concepisse neu suos prodidisse videantur. Quibus confirmatis rebus se statim signa translaturos confirmant, legatosque de pace primorum ordinum centuriones ad Caesarem mittunt. Interim alii suos in castra invitatandi causa adducunt, alii ab suis abducentur, adeo ut una castra iam facta ex binis viderentur; compluresque tribuni militum et centuriones ad Caesarem veniunt seque ei commendant. Idem hoc fit a principibus Hispaniae, quos illi evocaverant et secum in castris habebant obsidum loco. Hi suos notos hospitesque quaeerebant, per quem quisque eorum aditum commendationis haberet ad Caesarem. Afranii etiam filius adulescens de sua ac parentis sui salute cum Caesare per Sulpicium legatum agebat. Erant plena laetitia et gratulatione omnia et eorum, qui tanta pericula vitasse, et eorum, qui sine vulnere tantas res confecisse videbantur, magnumque fructum suae pristinae lenitatis omnium iudicio Caesar ferebat, consiliumque eius a cunctis probabatur.
75. Quibus rebus nuntiatis Afranio, ab instituto when the generals return, Petreius drives off Caesar's men, opere discedit seque in castra recipit, sic paratus, ut videbatur, ut, quicumque accidisset casus, hunc quieto et aequo animo ferret. Petreius vero non deserit se. Armat familiam: cum hac et praetoria cohorte cetratorum barbarisque equitibus paucis, beneficiariis suis, quos suae custodiae causa habere consuerat, improviso ad vallum advolat, colloquia militum interrumpit, nostros repellit a castris, quos deprendit, interficit. Reliqui coeunt inter se et repentina periculo exterriti sinistra sagis involvunt gladiosque destringunt atque ita se a cetratis equitibusque defendunt castrorum proprioquito confisi seque in castra recipiunt et ab iis cohortibus, quae erant in statione ad portas, defenduntur.

76. Quibus rebus confectis flens Petreius manipulos circumit militesque appellat: neu se neu Pompeium, imperatorem suum, adversariis ad supplicium tradant, obsecrat. Fit celeriter concursus in praetorium. Postulat, ut iurent omnes se exercitum ducesque non deserturos neque prodituros neque sibi separatim a reliquis consilium capturos. Princeps in haec verba iurat ipse; idem iusiurandum adigit Afranium; subsequuntur tribuni militum centurionesque; centuriatim producti milites idem iurant. Edicunt, penes quem quisque sit Caesaris miles, ut producat: productos palam in praetorio interficiunt. Sed plerosque ii, qui receperant, celant noctuque per vallum emittunt. Sic terrore oblato a ducibus crudelitas in supplicio, nova religio iurisiusandis rem ad pristinam belli rationem redegit.

77. Caesar milites adversariorum, qui in castra per tempus colloquii venerant, summa diligentia conquiri et remitti iubet. Sed ex numero tribunorum militum centurionumque nonnulli sua voluntate apud eum re 5 manserunt. Quos ille postea magno in honore habuit; centuriones in priores ordines, equites Romanos in tribunicium restituit honorem.

C. IULI CAESARIS

legionibus subsequitur. Nullum intercedebat tempus, quin extremit cum equitibus proeliarentur.

79. Genus erat hoc pugnae. Expeditae cohortes, fighting on the novissimum agmen claudebant pluresque in locis campestribus subsistebant. Si mons erat ascendendus, facile ipsa loci natura periculum repellebat, quod ex locis superioribus, qui antecesserant, suos ascendentes protegebant; cum vallis aut locus declivis suberat neque ii, qui antecesserant, morantibus opem ferre poterant, equites vero ex loco superiore in aversos tela coniciabant, tum magno erat in periculo res. Relinquebatur, ut, cum eiusmodi locis esset appropinquatum, legionum signa consistere iuberent magnoque impetu equitatum repellerent, eo submoto repente incitati cursu sese in valles universi demitterent atque ita transgressi rursus in locis superioribus consisterent. Nam tantum ab equitum suorum auxilio aberant, quorum numerum habebant magnum, ut eos superioribus perterritos proeliis in medium recuperent agmen ultroque eos tuerentur; quorum nulli ex itinere ex-cedere licebat, quin ab equitatu Caesaris exciperetur.

80. Tali dum pugnatur modo, lente atque paulatim and manouevring to shake off Caesar. proceditur crebroque, ut sint auxilio suis, subsistunt; ut tum accidit. Milia enim progressi IIII vehementiusque peragitati ab equitatu montem excelsum capiunt ibique una fronte contra hostem castra munient neque iumentis onera deponunt. Ubi Caesaris castra posita tabernaculaque constituta et dimissos equites pabulandi causa animum adverterunt, sese subito proripiant hora circiter sexta eiusdem diei et spem nacti morae discessu nostrorum equitum iter facere incipiunt. Qua re animum adversa Caesar relictis impedimentis subsequitur, praesidio paucas cohortes relinquit; hora decima subsequi pabulatores equitesque revocari iubet. Celeriter equitatus ad cotidi anum itineris officium revertitur. Pugnatur acriter ad novissimum agmen, adeo ut paene terga convertant, compluresque milites, etiam nonnulli centuriones, interficiuntur. Instabat agmen Caesaris atque universum imminebat.

81. Tum vero neque ad explorandum idoneum locum castris neque ad progrediendum data facultate consistunt necessario et procul ab aqua et natura iniquo loco castra ponunt. Sed isdem de causis Caesar, quae supra sunt demonstratae, proelio non laciesit et eo die tabernacula statui passus non est, quo paratiores essent ad insequendum omnes, sive noctu sive interdiu erumpent. Illi animadverso vitio castrorum tota nocte munitiones proferunt castraque castris convertunt. Hoc idem postero die a prima luce faciunt totumque in ea re diem consumunt. Sed quantum opere processerant et castra protulerant, tanto aberant ab aqua longius, et praesenti malo aliis malis remedia dabantur. Prima nocte aquandi causa nemo egreditur ex castris; proximo die praesidio in castris relicito universas ad aquam copias educunt, pabulatum emittitur nemo. His eos suppliciis male haberi Caesar et necessariam subire deditio nem quam proelio decertare malebat. Conatur tamen eos vallo fossa que circum munire, ut quam maxime repentina eorum eruptiones demoretur; quo necessario descensus existimabat. Illi et inopia pabuli adduxit et, quo essent ad iter expeditiores, omnia sarcinaria iumenta interfici iubent.

82. In his operibus consiliisque biduum consumitur; tertio die magna iam pars operis Caesaris processerat. Illi im-pediendae reliquae munitionis causa hora circiter nona signo dato legiones educunt aciemque sub castris instruunt. Caesar ab opere legiones revocat, equitatum omnem convenire iubet, aciem instruit; contra opinionem enim militum famamque omnium videri proelium defugisse magnum detrimentum afferebat. Sed isdem de causis, quae sunt cognitae, quo minus dimicare vellet, movebatur, atque hoc etiam magis, quod spatii brevitate etiam in fugam coniectis adversariis non multum ad summam victoria iuvare poterat. Non enim amplius pedum milibus duobus ab castris castra distabant. Hinc duas partes acies occupabant duae: tertia vacabat ad incursum atque impetum militarum relicta. Si proelium com-mitteretur, propinquitas castrorum celerem superatis ex fuga receptum dabat. Hac de causa constituerat signa inferentibus resistere, prior proelio non laccssere.
83. Acies erat Afraniana duplex legionum quinque, tertium in subsidiis locum alariae cohortes obtinebant; Caesaris triplex; sed primam aciem quaternae cohortes ex quinque legionibus tenebant; has subsidiariae ternaes et rursus aliae totidem suae ciusque legionis subsequebantur; sagittarii funditoresque media continebantur acie, equitatus latera cingebat. Tali instructa acie tenere uterque propositum videbatur: Caesar, nisi coactus proelium ne committeret; ille, ut opera Caesaris impediret. 10 Producitur tamen res, aciesque ad solis occasum continentur; inde utrique in castra discedunt. Postero die munitiones institutas Caesar parat perficere; illi vadum fluminis Sicoris temptare, si transire possent. Qua re animadversa Caesar Germanos levis armaturae equitumque partem flumen traicit crebrasque in ripis custodias disponit.

84. Tandem omnibus rebus obsessi, quartum iam diem sine pabulo retentis iumentis, aquae, lignorum, frumenti inopia colloquium petunt et id, si fieri possit, semoto a militibus loco. Ubi id a Caesare negatum et, palam si colloqui vellent, concessum est, datur obsidis loco Caesari filius Afranii. Venitur in eum locum, quem Caesar delegit. Audiente utroque exercitu loquitur Afranius: Non esse aut ipsis aut militibus succensendum, quod fidem erga imperatorem suum Cn. Pompeium conservare voluerint. Sed satis iam fecisse officio satisque supplicii tulisse. Perpessos...
omnium rerum inopiam; nunc vero paene ut feras circummunitos prohiberi aqua, prohiberi ingressu, neque corpore dolorem neque animo ignominiam ferre posse. Itaque se victos confiteri, orare atque obsecrare, si qui locus misericordiae relinquatur, ne ad ultimum supplicium progrede necesse habeant. Haec quam potest demississime et subiectissime exponit.

85. Ad ea Caesar respondit: Nulli omnium has Caesar's reply; their lives and property are partes vel querimoniae vel miserationis minus convenisse. Reliquos enim omnes portions of the army cannot be discharged. bona condicione et loco et tempore aequo conflagere noluerit, ut quam integerrima essent ad pacem omnia; exercitum suum, qui iniuria etiam accepta suisque interfectis, quos in sua potestate habuerit, conservavit et texerit; illius denique exercitus milites, qui per se de concilianda pace egerint, qua in re omnium suorum vitae consulendum putarint. Sic omnium ordinum partes in misericordia constississe; ipsos duces a pace abhorruisse; eos neque colloquii neque indutiarum iura servasse et homines imperitos et per colloquium deceptos crudelissime interfecisse. Accidisse igitur his, quod plerumque hominum nimia pertinacia atque arrogantia accidere soleat, uti eo recurrant et id cupidissime petant, quod paulo ante contemp- serint. Neque nunc se illorum humilitate neque aliqua temporis opportunitate postulare, quibus rebus opes augeantur suae; sed eos exercitus, quos contra se multos iam annos aluerint, velle dimitti. Neque enim sex legiones alia de causa missas in Hispaniam septimamque ibi conscriptam, neque tot tantasque classes paratas, neque submissos duces rei militaris peritos. Nihil horum ad pacandas Hispanias, nihil ad usum provinciae provisum, quae propter diuturnitatem pacis nullum auxilium desiderarat. Omnia haec iam pridem contra se parari: in se novi generis imperia constitui, ut idem ad portas urbanis praesideat rebus et duas bellicosissimas provincias absens tot annos obtineat; in se iura magistratuum commutari, ne expraetura et consulatu, ut semper, sed per paucos probati et electi in provincias mittantur; in se aetatis excussionem nihil valere, quin superioribus bellis probati ad obtenendos exercitus evocentur; in se uno non servari, quod sit omnibus datum semper imperatoribus, ut rebus feliciter gestis aut cum honore aliquo aut certe sine ignominia domum revertantur exercitumque dimittant. Quae tamen omnia et se tulisse patienter et esse laturum: neque nunc id agere, ut ab illis abductum exercitum teneat ipse, quod tamen sibi difficile non sit, sed ne illi habeant, quo contra se uti possint. Proinde, ut esset dictum, provinciis excederent exercitumque dimitterent; si id sit factum, se nocitum nemini. Hanc unam atque extremam esse pacis conditionem.
86. Id vero militibus fuit pergratum et iucundum, Delight of the soldiers. ut ex ipsa significatione cognosci potuit, ut, qui aliquid iusti incommodi exspectavissent, ultro praemium missionis ferrent. Nam cum de loco et de tempore eius rei controversia inferretur, et voce et manibus universi ex vallo, ubi constiterant, significare coeperunt, ut statim dimitterentur, neque omni interposita fide firmum esse posse, si in aliud tempus differretur. Paucis cum esset in utramque partem verbis disputatum, res huc deducitur, ut ii, qui habeant domicilium aut possessionem in Hispania, statim, reliqui ad Varum flumen dimittantur; ne quid iis noceatur, neu quis invitus sacramentum dicere cogatur, a Caesare cavetur.

87. Caesar ex eo tempore, dum ad flumen Varum veniatur, se frumentum daturum Arrangements for disbanding pollicetur. Addit etiam, ut, quod quaque eorum in bello amiserit, quae sint 5 penes milites suos, iis; qui amiserant, restituatur; militibus aequa facta aestimatione pecuniam pro his rebus dissolvit. Quascumque postea controversias inter se milites habuerunt, sua sponte ad Caesarem in ius adierunt. Petreius atque Afranius cum stipendium ab legionibus paene seditione facta flagitarentur, cuius illi diem nondum venisse dicerent, Caesar ut cognosceret, postulatum est, eoque utrique, quod statuit, contenti fuerunt. Parte circiter tertia exercitus eo biduo dimissa duas legiones suas antecedere, reliquas subseque iussit, ut non longo inter se spatio castra facerent, eique negotio Q. Fufium Calenum legatum praeficit. Hoc eius praescripto ex Hispania ad Varum flumen est iter factum atque ibi reliqua pars exercitus dimissa est.

ABBREVIATIONS.

Abl., ablative; abs., absolute; acc., accusative; cf., confer, compare; dat., dative; dep., dependent; edd., editions; e.g., exempli gratia, for example; i.e., id est, that is; infin. infinitive; lit., literally; mss., manuscripts; obj., objective; or. obl., oratio obliqua; pres., present; subj., subjunctive; viz., videlicet, namely; B.G., Caesar De Bello Gallico; =, equivalent to.

I.

1. litteris. This letter was conveyed by Curio (note on ch. 18, l. 21) and contained the proposal that Pompey and Caesar should both resign their provinces and dismiss their armies, and that Caesar should then go to Rome and stand for the consulship. This was on Jan. 1st, 49 B.C.

4. ut etc., 'that the question should be put to the Senate in accordance with' etc., i.e. 'that the letter should be considered by the Senate.' Only the consuls, praetors, and tribunes had the right of proposing a question to the Senate.

6. infinite, 'without limiting the subject of debate.'

8. sin ... respicient, lit. 'but if they kept their eyes on Caesar,' i.e. would not break with him.

9. ut ... fecerint, 'as they had done': id quod might have been used for ut, the subj. being due to oratio obliqua.

13. receptum, 'a retreat' to Caesar's favour, i.e. 'a chance of falling back' on it.

Scipio. Full name, Q. Caecilius Metellus Pius Scipio, now Pompey's father-in-law.
NOTES.

II.

2. aberat. The mss. and most edd. read aderat, which would mean, not 'was present' in the Senate, as he would have forfeited the imperium by entering the city, but 'was at hand' outside the walls. Cf. ch. 3.

4. ut, 'as for instance'; repeated ll. 9 and 14. M. Marcellus was a relative of the consul C. Marcellus, and friendly to Pompey.

5. ingressus etc., 'adopting the following line of argument.' An explanatory clause following is often introduced by is, as here.

8. quo praesidio, 'by which protection,' i.e. 'under the protection of which.'

10. censebat, 'gave his opinion,' i.e. 'made a motion.' The subst. regularly used in this sense is sententia, l. 4, 17, 19.

11. timere. Note the change from 'oblique petition' to 'oblique narration.'

12. ab eo seems to be used for a se for the sake of clearness.

ne ... videretur. Two distinct ideas are combined here. Pompey seemed to be keeping the legions as a menace to Caesar, and C. feared he might really do so.

14. M. (Caelius) Rufus, one of Cicero's correspondents, who joined Caesar in order to get rid of his debts, and afterwards deserted him.

16. convincio etc., 'were rebuked and violently assailed by a tirade of the consul's.'

23. adversus etc., 'should be held guilty of treason.'

24. intercedit agrees only with the first subject, which is often the case when the verb precedes.

26. ut quisque etc., 'the more harshly ... a senator spoke, the more he was commended' etc.

III.

6. evocantur. A different sense from that in l. 2, see Vocab. Ordines has three meanings—1, centuries; 2, the rank of a centurion; 3, the centurions themselves (B.G. 6. 7).

8. ipsum. 'Even the place of assembly was crowded,' as well as the city generally.
10. qui veteres etc., 'who had long been at feud with Caesar.'

14. L. Piso, father of Calpurnia, Caesar's wife.

IV.

3. Caesaris, objective gen., 'his old feud with Caesar.' So also dolor repulsae, ' vexation at his defeat' in his recent candidature for the consulship, B.C. 51.

6. regum etc., 'the bribes (to be got) for conferring the title of king,' as was done years afterwards by M. Antonius. We cannot connect regum app. with spe, because et is not coordinate with ac.

7. Sullam, the famous dictator, who put Marius and his partisans to death by the Proscription.

8. redeat, 'is to come back,' i.e. 'will naturally come.' As a Cornelius, he considered himself the proper successor of Cornelius Sulla.

10. pro necessitudine, 'on the strength of his connexion by marriage with Pompey,' see note on ch. 1, l. 13.

11. iudiciorum, 'about the courts of law,' i.e. lest by some fresh change in their constitution the potentes (l. 12) should lose their predominance in them.

15. totum, 'wholly,' adverbial use.

17. quorum etc., 'with most of whom he himself had saddled Caesar during the time of the marriage connexion between them,' i.e. before the death of his wife Julia, Caesar's daughter.

18. infamia etc., 'the scandal about the two legions.' Cf. iniuriae retentorum equitum, B.G. 3. 10.

19. quas etc., 'which he had diverted from their march to Asia and Syria (the Parthian War) and employed to establish his own power' etc. Asiae = Asiatico.

V.

5. extremi etc., 'of preserving by the veto the most elementary of their rights,' i.e. their inviolability, as sacrosancti.

7. septimo die, the seventh day of these proceedings which began on January 1st.

suarum actionum, 'of their official career.'

12. quo nisi etc., 'which was never resorted to before by the most daring senators, except' etc. The effect of this decree was to arm the magistrates with dictatorial power, or to proclaim martial law. The mss. and most edd. read latorum for senatorum, 'the proposers of motions.' Observe the subjective gen. omnium and obj. gen. salutis depending on the same word, desperatione.

17. a. d. VII etc., i.e. ante diem septimum Idus Januarias, 'on the seventh of January.' See Grammar on the Roman Calendar.

19. qua ex die, i.e. from January 1st. The 'assembly days' were the 3rd and 4th.

21. gravissime etc., 'the most oppressive and harsh decrees are passed.'

25. si qua etc., 'in case things might be brought to a peaceable settlement by any sense of fairness on their part.'

VI.

1. extra urbem. The Senate usually met in the Temple of Bellona, outside the walls, when it wished to give audience to a general with the imperium.

3. agit etc., 'made the same declarations as he had communicated through Scipio.'

5. legiones ... X. He had really only two legions ready, viz., those which he had got from Caesar; the rest had been levied long before for service in Spain, but had not yet been mobilised.

6. cognitum, supply esse, 'he knew and was assured.'

9. tota etc. This and the three following clauses give the various motions proposed, of which only the first and third were passed.

10. Faustus Sulla was son of the Dictator, and so would have influence with Bocchus, king of Mauretania, whose father had done Sulla good service.

12. Iuba, King of Numidia, who owed his throne to Pompey.
13. passurum, supply se as subject.

19. neque deiciuntur, are not included in the balloting.

The constitutional way of assigning the provinces was by casting lots among those ex-consuls and ex-praetors who had gone out of office at least five years before. Scipio and Domitius had only been four and two years respectively out of office, whereas Philippus (father of the tribune, l. 14) had been so for six years. Cotta was related to Caesar’s mother, Aurelia.

22. ad populum etc., that a proposal should be made to the people for conferring the imperium on them’ by a so-called lex curiata, which was a mere form.

25. privati, the proconsuls mentioned in ch. 5, l. 15.

VII.

2. omnium etc., he relates all the wrongs done to him by his enemies at different times.

7. novum etc., a novel precedent. The ut-clause explains what this was.

16. factum in etc., it had been on the occasion of mischievous laws.

17. templis, referring no doubt to the occupation of the Capitol by Tib. Gracchus and his friends, 133 B.C., of the Aventine by C. Gracchus and Fulvius Flaccus, 121 B.C., and of the Capitol once more by Saturninus, 100 B.C.

21. quidem. After this the mss. add—nulla lex promulgata, non cum populo agi coeptum, nulla secessio facta, clearly an interpolation, being quite out of the construction.

hortatur etc., he exhorts them to defend against his enemies the reputation and dignity of that general (himself) under whose command they had for nine years served (lit. carried on) the State most successfully, won very many victories, and subjugated the whole of Gaul and Germany.

For rempublicam gerere, cf. Liv. 2. 64, in Volscis respublica egregie gesta.

imperatoris is attracted into the relative clause, as is often the case when that comes first, cf. cuius rei causa venerat, ch. 8, l. 7 (where the antecedent clause has to be partly supplied). For the abl. annis cf. note on horis quinque, ch. 46.
NOTES.

26. XIII, for tertiae decimae, the ordinal num. adj.
27. tumultus, see Vocabulary.
28. imperatoris. Note the obj. gen. after iniurias, 'wrongs done to their general' etc. In l. 3 inimicorum is subjective.

VIII.

1. Ariminum. To reach this town (now Rimini) from Ravenna, Caesar had to cross the small river Rubico, which separated Gallia Cisalpina from Italy proper. This was practically a declaration of war against the Senate, and later writers represented him as hesitating long before crossing.

7. cuius rei etc. There is an ellipse of de ea re before cuius, cf. note on imperatoris, ch. 7, l. 21.

8. velle etc., 'Pompey wished to clear himself before Caesar, lest he should construe what he (Pompey) had done on public grounds as an insult to himself.'

14. reipublicae dimittere, 'to waive for the sake of the State.'

15. cum ... speret, 'when he fancied he was doing an injury to them.' Observe spero in this sense with pres. infin.

IX.

6. si ... possint, 'in the hope that by taking a little trouble they might succeed in putting an end to' etc. Cf. end of ch. 5.

12. cuius etc., 'though the people had ordered that he should be allowed to stand (for the consulship) at the next elections without being present.' This was a quite exceptional favour granted him in the year 52 B.C. See Vocab. for rationem habere.

16. ut etc., a substantival clause expressing the demand contained in his letter.

19. quonam etc., 'what was the object of all this but his overthrow?' A rhetorical question, and therefore expressed as usual with the first and third persons, by acc. and infin., while indirect questions for information are in the subjunctive, but cf. note on cur esset, ch. 32.

23. ipsi, i.e. Pompey and himself.
28. ipse is of course Pompey, se is Caesar.

29. fore uti ... componantur, a common periphrasis for compositum iri.

X.

1. Caesare. Of course this is L. Caesar the younger.

6. reverteretur, 'let C. return,' the jussive subj., by historical sequence for revertatur.

9. quoad etc., 'till a pledge was given.'

XI.

1. erat etc., 'it was an unfair arrangement to demand that Caesar should..., while he himself held both provinces and legions belonging to others.' Either alienas belongs to legiones alone, or provincias refers, not to Spain, but to the other provinces over which Pompey was assuming a sort of control. Note the asyndeton (absence of copula) at ipsum and at dilectus, 1. 5, marking the strong contrast.

6. neque, ante etc., 'but not to fix on what day he would go.' Compare the use of ante in dates—ante diem VII. Id. Jan., ch. 5.

9. tempus etc., 'but his not granting time for an interview nor promising to come himself caused great despair about peace.' Observe the use of the infin. as subject of afferebat, and omission of se before accessurum, as in ch. 6, l. 13.

11. ab Arimino. The use of the prep. implies that Caesar's troops were not in the town, but outside the walls. Cf. Arimino at the beginning of the chap.

12. Arretium (now Arezzo) was an important place to secure, being on the road from Ariminum to Rome.

XII.

1. Iguvium, now Gubbio.

10. recipit, 'takes possession of,' often used of accepting the voluntary submission of a place.
XIII.

1. decuriones. The town council of a free town or colony was called _ordo decurionum_. _Auximum_ is now Osimo.

3. docent etc., 'they inform him that they cannot decide this matter, but that' etc., lit. 'that the matter is not one of their own judgment.' Cf. ch. 35, _neque sui iudicii neque suarum esse virium_ etc.

7. _proinde_ etc., 'therefore he should consider the future.' A rare sense of _posteritas_, found also in _Cic. Fam._ 2. 18. For _proinde_ in exhortation cf. end of ch. 19.

10. _ex primo ordine_, see Introd. ii. § 2.

15. _primi pili_ etc. See Introd. ii. § 2.

17. _Attianos_ etc., 'the soldiers of Attius.' Cf. _Domitiani_, ch. 16; _Pompeiani_, ch. 28, _Afraniani_, ch. 69 etc.

XIV.

5. _sanctiore_. 'The more sacred treasury' was reserved for special emergencies such as a Gallic war.

6. _Caesar_ etc., 'for it was falsely reported that Caesar was just on the point of arriving, and that his cavalry were close at hand.' The _personal_ pass. construction, for which we use the impersonal.

13. _Capuam_, the chief city of Campania, some way to the S.E. of Rome.

15. _lege Iulia_, a law passed by Caesar in his consulship, B.C. 59, granting lands in Campania to 20,000 poor citizens, in spite of the opposition of the other consul Bibulus and the nobles. Many of these settlers were veterans from Pompey's armies.

16. _in iudo_, see Vocab. It was usual at Rome for the candidates for high offices to give shows of gladiators, wild beasts etc., in order to win popularity. The swordsmen were trained for the purpose by a fencing master (_lanista_) and kept in a _ludus_ _gladiatorius_.

20. _reprehendebatur_, no doubt because the memory of the ravages of Spartacus in the Servile War, 20 years before, was still hateful.

_circum familias_ etc., 'he distributed among the large establishments in the district of Campania to be guarded.'
XV.

6. Labienus, a legatus of Caesar's who had highly distinguished himself in the Gallic war, and now forsook him for Pompey. Cingulum was a little to the W. of Auximum.

10. Asculum, the modern Ascoli. The epithet is added because there was a town of the same name in Apulia.

11. Lentulus Spinther had been consul in 57 B.C., and helped to bring about Cicero's recall from exile.

14. incidit etc., 'he fell in with Vib. Rufus, who had been sent by Pompey into Picenum to secure the loyalty of the people.'

23. cum his etc., 'with these he makes his way by forced marches to Domitius A. at Corfinium.' A most important town of the Paeligni, capital of the Italian Confederation in the Social War. Domitius had been chosen by the Senate to supersede Caesar in Gaul, ch. 6.

26. Alba, sc. Forentina, on the road between Corfinium and Rome.

Marsis. These and the Paeligni were hardy warlike tribes, in the hilly country east of Rome.

XVI.

1. oppido. The mss. read Firmo, but Asculum, where Lentulus was, is clearly meant.

6. fluminis, the Aternus, now called Pescara.

XVII.

4. Caesarem etc., '(to say) that Caesar's way could easily be barred by two armies and the difficulties of the country, and his corn-supply cut off.' The construction changes from oblique petition to oblique narration.

12. quaterna etc., 'four iugera apiece and for the centurions and reserve men in proportion,' i.e. twice as much, since the pay of a centurion or evocatus was double that of a private.

XVIII.

1. quod oppidum, i.e. Sulmo, implied in Sulmonenses, 'the people of Sulmo.'
6. M. Antonium. He had been quaestor in Gaul under Caesar for two years, so was not without military experience. The fact of Caesar sending a smaller force than the garrison of the town showed his confidence in the goodwill of the latter.

7. simulatque, = simulac, for which simul alone is also used, as in ch. 30.

12. mitteretur. Historical sequence is quite usual after a historic pres., as here, but we also find primary sequence, as in ch. 20, ut .. contentur.

18. eo triduo, 'during the next three days.'

19. rege Norico, probably Voccio, King of Noreia, B.G. l. 53.

21. Curionem, formerly a zealous aristocrat, now a strong supporter of Caesar. See Introd. i. § 7.

XIX.

1. dissimulans, 'concealing his real feelings' (or 'the fact'). Simulo is to pretend what is not the case.

3. ne etc., 'not to be disheartened, but to prepare all that was necessary for the defence of the town.' Ne is not repeated with que, but ut is supplied from it.

11. concilia. The asyndeton here points a contrast, as the three co-ordinate clauses which precede are connected by atque and que. We should insert 'but' or 'while.' Distinguish concilium, 'an assembly,' from consilium, 'a council of war,' composed of officers, who might speak their opinions, as in ch. 67.

14. sese etc., 'that he would not expose his cause to the hazard of a general engagement, and that it was not by his advice or in accordance with his wishes that,' etc.

17. id .. fiebat, 'this was being made impossible by' etc.

XX.

6. ducem etc., 'their general D., out of hope and confidence in whom they had stayed there, was forming a plan of escape, leaving them all in the lurch.' Cuius is obj. gen.

9. debere se, 'so they ought.' The asyndeton forcibly introduces their conclusion.
11. videretur, the subj. of virtual oratio obliqua, when the verb of saying or thinking etc. is itself in the subj., instead of what is said or thought.

12. ut ... consentur, 'that they were on the point of coming to blows and settling it by force of arms.' See note on ch. 18, l. 11.

18. se etc. The or. obl. is introduced by legatos mittunt.

XXI.

4. ne qua etc., 'lest any change of feeling might be brought about either by bribes or encouragement or false tidings, because often in war great disasters occur through trifling occasions,' lit. 'impulses.' Intercederent is or. obl. of the thought.

12. non certis etc., 'not in parties with regular intervals between, as had been his custom on the preceding days, but in a continuous line of guards and posts, so as to be in touch with one another, and fill up the whole line of investment.' Stationes were whole detachments, larger than vigiliae.

18. neque etc., 'but not a man of them was so slack and spiritless as to go to sleep that night.' Qui introducing a consecutive clause = ut.

20. tanta etc., 'so keen was the expectation of a decisive result that the attention and emotions of all were strained in different directions as to what was happening ... and what would be the issue to each.' We should expect exceptur essent.

XXII.

3. velle. Supply se as in ch. 11, polliceri. The or. obl. is introduced by colloquitur.

10. quae erant etc., 'which were in fact very great.' This indic. and those in the quod-clauses which follow show that these remarks are Caesar's own, as the words of Lentulus would be in the subj. Cf. note on qui amiserant, ch. 87.

11. pontificum. Caesar himself had been elected pontifex maximus when quite a young man.

12. ex praetura, 'after his praetorship.' Caesar had been allotted the province of Spain B.c. 59, after his consulship, but resigned it in favour of Lentulus, in order to take Gaul.
16. in ea re, ‘while engaged in his defence.’

17. suam, ‘their,’ refers to the object, as there is no danger of ambiguity.

\[\text{ut \ldots vindicaret, ‘to assert his own liberty and that of the Roman people, ground down by a small faction.’}\]

20. quod etc., ‘his success in getting his own life spared would be an encouragement to the rest to hope for themselves.’ Note sua applying to Lentulus, suam to the rest, as the context is clear.

23. durius consulere, ‘to form harsh designs against their life’ means ‘to meditate suicide.’

XXIII.

14. HS. Ix, i.e. sexagies centena milia sestertium, ‘six million sesterces or about £48,000. The symbol HS. stands for IIS. (duo et semis) or 2\frac{1}{2} \text{asses.}’ See Grammar on Roman money.

16. quattuorviris. The mss. have duumviris (see note on 30, l. 3), but Kraner changes the reading on the authority of inscriptions.

17. ne \ldots videatur, ‘that he might not seem to have shown more self-restraint in respect of men’s lives than of money,’ i.e. to have been covetous, though not cruel.

20. sacramentum etc., ‘to take the (military) oath in his presence,’ or swear obedience to him as their new general.

21. iustum iter, ‘a regular day’s march,’ about 15 miles.

23. Larinatium, ‘the people of Larinum,’ a large town of Samnium near the Tifernus. The Frentani were also in Samnium N.W. of Larinum. The chief town of the Marrucini was Teate.

XXIV.

3. Brundisium, the modern Brindisi, still the most important harbour on the E. coast of Italy.

10. signa \ldots transferunt, ‘come over in a body to Curius,’ lit. ‘carry over their standards.’ Cf. signa inferre, ‘to attack’; signa referre, ‘to retreat’; signa tollere, ‘to break up camp,’ etc.

19. neque vero etc., 'but that the same good was not done when terms were proposed through others at a great distance, as when all the terms were discussed face to face.'

XXV.

2. veteranis III., 'three of them veteran legions.'

4. compleverat, 'had filled up' by adding the cohorts taken from Lentulus, Attius, etc.

6. Dyrrhachium, a town on the E. shore of the Adriatic, anciently called Epidamnus. According to Plutarch 30 cohorts went with the consuls.

10. remansisset. Note the difference between this word and restitisset, l. 13. Pompey had either stayed there permanently, in order to maintain full control of the Adriatic, or had merely stopped there temporarily for want of ships. The indirect disjunctive question is regularly introduced by -ne ...

14. veritus. The subject is of course Caesar; ille is Pompey.

15. exitus etc., 'he began blocking up the outlets and workings of the harbour of Brundisium, an operation which was conducted on the following plan.'

17. moles etc., 'he began throwing in large stones and rubbish from the shore on either side.' Moles atque aggerem is usually taken as a hendiadys, 'an embanked mole,' and molis (sing.) in l. 21 is no doubt the 'mole.'

19. cum agger etc., 'as the rubbish could not be kept together where the water was deeper, he proceeded to station double rafts, measuring 30 feet each way, in a line with the mole.' Altiore aqua is abl. abs. ; cf. rapidissimo flumine, ch. 50. Quoqueversus = utroqueversus.

23. Lis, dat. after inungebat.

26. a fronte etc., 'in front and on both sides.'

XXVI.

1. onerarias. This is not merely an epithet of navis, or it would be coupled to magnas by que, but navis oneraria is a fixed expression for 'a merchant ship,' opposed to navis longa, 'a man of war'; cf. naves longas veteres, ch. 30, l. 16.

3. ibi = in his, 'on board of these.'
8. atque etc., 'and yet while C. was carrying on these operations, he did not think he ought to neglect terms of peace.' Observe the limiting force of ut after ita, 'that nevertheless.'

12. ea ... temptata, 'his repeated efforts in this direction.'

16. Libonis, afterwards father-in-law of Sextus Pompeius.

19. magnopere etc., 'he points out that he is very confident that, if an interview is granted him, hostilities will be abandoned on fair terms.'

21. cuius rei, dep. on laudis etc., 'the credit and reputation of this achievement.'

23. illo ... agente, 'by his advice and agency.'

XXVII.

9. sub ... profectione, 'at the very moment of his departure.'

10. vicos plateasque, 'the streets and broadways.' The viae mentioned below were the high roads running through the town, which, being broader than the rest, could not so easily be barricaded or built across.

12. haec ... inaequat, 'these he levels over with light hurdles and earth,' thus concealing the trench altogether, so that troops attempting to march over would fall into it and be transfixed by the stakes.

17. expeditos, 'lightly equipped,' i.e. not encumbered by the sarcinae or packs, usually weighing about 45 lbs. (English). In 1. 20 expedito is 'convenient,' 'free from obstacles.'

XXVIII.

3. Caesaris rebus, 'Caesar's cause.'

8. sub noctem, 'at nightfall.' Cf. Horace's sub lacrimosa Troiae funera, 'just before.'

12. vallum caecum, 'the concealed row of stakes,' planted in the trenches. Caecus, 'blind,' sometimes means 'unseen,' just as surdus, 'deaf,' sometimes is 'unheard.'

16. reprehensas excipiunt, 'and after grappling capture them.'

XXIX.

1. etsi etc., 'although as regards the prospect of bringing the war to a close he approved most of the plan of collecting ships and crossing the sea in pursuit of Pompey.'
8. relinquebatur ut etc., 'the only course left was to wait for ships' etc. The substantival ut-clause is subject to relinquebatur.

9. a freto, see Vocabulary.

14. Galliam ... temptari, 'that attempts should be made to secure the adhesion of Gaul' etc.

XXX.

3. duumviris, the two chief magistrates of free towns, who were sometimes called consules or praetores.

5. deducendas curent, 'should have them brought.'

10. sorte ... debat, 'had a right to hold Africa, which had been allotted to him.' Caesar's motive for securing these three provinces no doubt was that they supplied Rome with corn.

11. Caralitani, 'the people of Caralis,' chief town of Sardinia, on the S. coast.

simul here = simulatque, 'as soon as they heard.'

12. profecto, sc. eo or Valerio.

18. Lucanis Bruttitisque, the two divisions of Italy which lay nearest to Sicily. The first was called Lucania; for the other the name of its people was regularly used.

21. quibus ... cognito, 'hearing of Curio's approach when these preparations were nearly completed.' The first abl. abs. is subordinate to the second.

23. omnibus etc., 'utterly unprepared in all respects.' The mss. and most edd. read imparatissimis, an abl. abs.

XXXI.

1. nacti ... perveniunt, 'Valerius and Curio finding Sardinia and Sicily respectively unoccupied by military governors make their way there with armies.' Imperia is used here for governors with the imperium.

5. ad Auximum, 'in the neighbourhood of A.'

10. nactus ... obtinuerat, 'having secured opportunities for making these efforts because a few years previously he had held that province as propraetor.'

14. sed ... cogit, 'but forced him to weigh anchor and leave the place.' This was the more inexcusable, as Tubero was on his own side.
NOTES.

XXXII.
2. intermitteretur, 'might be left free'; see Vocab.
8. latum, 'a motion had been carried.' Ferre is usually 'to propose a motion,' perferre 'to carry' it.
10. dicendi mora, 'by talking against time.'
11. ut sui etc., cf. note on 9, 1. 9.
12. cur ... esset ? This and the following are rhetorical questions, and so might have been expressed by acc. and infin. ; cf. note on 9, 1. 19. In 72, 1. 5, there is a special reason for the subj.
15. ultro postulavisset, 'he had actually made the demand,' instead of waiting for Pompey to make it. Ultro often has the sense of 'turning the tables,' or doing the reverse of what is expected.
18. in se, 'in their own case.'
20. legionibus, those mentioned in ch. 4.
24. rempublicam etc., 'to undertake the task of government.'
25. oneri. This dat., usually called dat. of purpose or consequence, is more simply described by Roby as dat. of predication, especially with esse.
29. ad quos etc., 'that importance was attributed to those to whom envoys were sent,' i.e. that the mere fact of sending envoys to any one was a confession of his importance.
31. tenuis ... animi, 'the sentiments of a weak and narrow mind.'

XXXIII.
6. eodem etc., 'that he would treat alike (lit. 'hold in the same place') those who remained at Rome and those who were in Caesar's camp.' He would treat both as outlaws.
9. L. Metellus, the well-known tribune who vainly attempted to hinder Caesar from helping himself to money from the treasury. Caesar is said to have taken some three and a half millions (of our money).
14. ulteriorem Galliam, another name for G. Transalpina, or Gaul beyond the Alps, corresponding roughly to modern France, since its conquest by Caesar. Gallia Citerior was also called Cisalpina. Caesar left Rome in charge of the praetor M. Aemilius Lepidus, with the title of praefectus urbi.
XXXIV.

3. Corfinio, taken with dimiserat.

5. navibus, abl. of accompaniment, used without cum when troops, ships, etc., are spoken of. Cf. 31, l. 12; 36, l. 1; and copiis, 41, l. 7. Massilia, the modern Marseilles, was originally a Greek colony from Phocaea, in Asia Minor, founded in the sixth century B.C.

Igilii. Igilium was a small island off the W. coast of Italy, nearly opposite Cosa in Etruria. Cosanum is 'the territory of Cosa.'

6. colonis, here not 'colonists,' but 'tenant-farmers.'

9. officia, contrasted with beneficia. The latter is a kindness regarded as spontaneous, officium often conveys the idea of a return for previous services, or a mere discharge of obligations.

13. in ... fide, 'under their protection.

XXXV.

1. quindecim primos, 'the fifteen presidents' of the Senate of Massilia (with 600 members).

4. auctoritatem, 'the lead' of all Italy. At debeere the construction changes from oblique petition to obl. narration.

6. ad ... mentes, 'to bring them to a healthy frame of mind.'

8. ex auctoritate, 'on the resolution of the council.'

10. sui iudicil, see note on 13, l. 3.

14. patronos. Not only individual foreigners, but whole communities were often under the special protection of some distinguished Roman, who looked after their interests at Rome.

alter ... alter probably refer to Caesar and Pompey in reverse order, as C. had never carried on war near Marseilles, and so could not have conquered the Sallyes, a Ligurian tribe. Pompey had doubtless rewarded the Massilians for their loyalty during the war with Sertorius, who had received help from many of the Gauls.

16. attribuerit, 'had assigned as tributaries.'
XXXVI.

3. receptus, not exactly 'received,' but 'admitted.'

summa etc., 'he is invested with full powers for carrying on the war.'

7. parum ... utuntur, 'they utilise those which were defective in their bolts or timber and sails for fitting out and repairing the rest.'

11. quibus. This use of the relative, which is simply co-ordinating, or equivalent to a conjunction with the demonstr. pron., must be distinguished from the true relative use in adjectival clauses. It is best translated by a demonstr. pron., with or without a conjunction. Here—'indignant at these wrongs.'

Arelāte, (now Arles) a town on the Rhone, here abl. of place, same form as nom.

16. a qua die, 'from the day on which.' For the gender, cf. ante certam diem, ch. 2, l. 22.

XXXVII.

1. C. Fabium. He had been a legatus of Caesar in Gaul, but is only slightly mentioned in B. G. 5.

6. L. Afranio. He had served under Pompey in the wars with Sertorius and Mithridates, and was consul 60 B.C.

10. magnis itineribus, 'by forced marches.' A magnum iter was 24 miles, cf. note on 23, l. 21.

XXXVIII.

3. (M.) Petreius, celebrated as the general who really defeated Catiline, while the consul C. Antonius had the nominal command.

Varro (M. Terentius), a famous grammarian or literary critic, whose chief work, De Lingua Latina, is still extant.

5. alter ... tertius. These words, like alter ... alter in 35, must refer to Varro and Petreius in reverse order, as it is plain from what follows that Petreius, not Varro, held Lusitania.
6. saltu Castulonensi, 'the range of Castulo,' now the Sierra Morena, stretching from E. to W. between the Anas (Guadiana) and the Baetis (Guadalquivir).

12. equites ... imperantur, 'a requisition for auxiliary horse and foot is laid by Petreius on the whole of Lusitania, and by Afranius on Celtiberia,' etc. Lusitania corresponds with Portugal, Celtiberia with Aragon; the Cantabri are the modern Asturians.

17. ad Herdam, cf. note on 31, l. 5.

XXXIX.

3. scutatae ... cetratae. See Introd. ii. § 5.

9. nominatim ... evocato, 'specially summoning all the most famous warriors out of all the states.'

11. huc = ad hos, 'added to these.'

optimi generis, 'some of an excellent race of men from the Aquitani' etc. For the gen. without a noun to depend on, cf. huc ... Thessalos ac reliquarum gentium ... adiecerat, bk. 3, ch. 4. The expression is peculiar.

12. audierat etc. A very improbable report, as such a march along the N. coast of Africa would be far more difficult and dangerous than a voyage to Spain. The whole passage would apply better to Afranius than to Caesar, and it is thought likely that some words have been lost.

15. mutuas ... sumpsit, 'he borrowed sums of money.' But Caesar was now in no lack of money, after opening the Roman treasury.

XL.

2. Sicori, now the Sègre.

4. his pontibus, 'by these bridges,' ablative of direction of motion.

10. egressis ... praesidio, 'in order to cover the foraging parties which had gone out.' The common reading is egressae, going with legiones.

12. subito ... interruptus, 'suddenly the bridge was broken down by the violence of the wind and the swollen state of the river.'

22. diversam ... constituit, 'formed in line with two fronts looking opposite ways,' like Joab and Abishai in 2 Sam. x. 9-10.
28. suspicatus etc., 'surmising that, as actually happened, the leaders of the opposite side would avail themselves of the opportunity and favour of fortune to surprise our men.' This periphrasis for usuros esse is not so common as that for the fut. infin. pass., cf. 9, l. 29.

XLI.

1. eo biduo, 'two days after.'
7. omnibus copiis, cf. note on 34, l. 5.
8. triplici ... acie, 'in three lines,' the usual fighting formation; see Introd ii. § 4.

ad Ilerdam. The prep. is inserted because he advanced to the neighbourhood of the town which was itself in possession of the enemy.

13. per Afranium etc., 'that it was due to A. that a battle did not take place.'
17. vallo ... iussit, 'he would not allow it to be fortified by a rampart, which must have projected and been seen from a distance, but ordered a trench 15 ft. wide to be dug in front opposite the enemy.' Such a work could be carried out secretly and the men not be exposed to fire.
22. prius ... quam etc., 'before it could be perceived.' The subj. expresses a purpose of concealment; the indic. would have only stated the fact that it was observed afterwards.

XLII.

4. singulaque etc., 'and assigned each side of the camp to one legion to fortify.' One side was entrenched already, so three legions only would be required for this work, hence three were left to protect them as stated below, l. 11, since Caesar had altogether six legions in Spain (ch. 39).
10. neque = non tamen, 'but ... not.'
12. munitione fossae, 'the trench as a defence,' gen. of definition, cf. praemium missionis, ch. 86.

XLIII.

3. planitia ... CCC, 'a plan about 300 paces across.'
4. in hoc...spatio, 'at about the centre of this.' A common idiom for huius. Caesar's plan was to establish a fortified post in the rear of Afranius's camp, so as to cut off his communications with the town.

10. antesignanos, see Introd. ii. § 4.

16. allis ... subsidiis, 'further reserves being sent to their support,' i.e. to that of the enemy. For this sense of sub in composition, cf. subvenio, succurro, and succedo.

XLIV.

1. ut . . . procurrerent, 'first to make a great rush forward.' These subjunctive clauses with ut are equivalent to infinitives.

7. cum Lusitanis etc., 'being accustomed to a certain uncivilised style of fighting in their wars with the L.,' etc. The MSS. omit barbaro, hence in some odd. quodam is changed into eodem, but barbaro would certainly be omitted by a copyist after barbaris.

8. quod ... moveatur, 'because it is usual for the soldier to be greatly influenced by the practice of the regions in which he has been long established.' Cf. B.G., 2. 1, exercitum hiemare atque inveterascere in Gallia.

11. generis of course depends on pugnae, dat. after insuetos.

12. ab . . . latere, 'on their exposed side,' i.e. that on which they were not protected by their comrades.

14. ab signis etc., usually 'to desert,' here merely 'to quit the main body.' Neque ... neque here simply mean 'and not . . . nor.'

18. atque . . . recepit, 'but fell back on the nearest hill'; cf. note on 74, l. 8.

XLV.

8. dum ... volunt, 'wishing to make up for' (lit. 'mend') 'the loss sustained.'

9. longius, 'too far.' A frequent use of the comparative.

13. praeruptus etc., 'the ground was precipitous, steep on both sides, and its width was such that three cohorts in battle array filled the whole space, so that reserves could not be sent to their aid on the flanks, nor could cavalry be any help to them if hard pressed.'

18. leni . . . vergebat, 'sloped gently down.'

24. virtute et patientia, 'with courage and endurance.' The abl. of manner is usually accompanied by an epithet; otherwise cum is prefixed by the best prose writers; cf. note on 46, l. 11. Here possibly the expression may be explained as a kind of hendiadys = forti patientia.

29. ut ... reciperet, ‘to withdraw the exhausted men by sending fresh cohorts to the same spot.’

XLVI.

2. horis quinque. This abl. of duration occurs again in 47, l. 9, so also novem annis 7, l. 22.

3. consumptis etc., ‘having exhausted all their javelins they drew their swords and charged up the hill against the cohorts.’ Note the two abl. abs., the latter of which is best translated as co-ordinate with the principal verb. For adversus montem a frequent construction is adverso monte.

8. compulsis, agreeing with nonnulla parte by the constructio ad sensum. Some take nonnulla parte adverbially = ‘partly,’ making compulsis agree with cohortibus.

11. summa. The mss. and most edd. read summum agreeing with iugum, so that virtute would stand alone, as in ch. 45.

14. nostri etc., ‘about seventy of our men.’

15. primo hastato, ‘the first century of hastati of the first cohort’; see Introd. ii. § 2.

18. amplius DC. The numeral is sexcenti, since amplius does not usually take abl., even without quam.

XLVII.

1. sed haec etc., ‘but the opinion expressed about that day is that both sides thought they had got the best of it.’ The ut-clause is epexegetical or explanatory of haec opinio.

5. stetissent. The subj. is used in the causal clauses because they are in or. obl., expressing the soldiers’ view.

6. ab initio. The mss. omit ab, but the point is that they had not only taken the hill ‘at first,’ but held it ‘from the first.’

Quae ... fuerat. We might expect fuisset, because of the or. obl., but the clause is merely adjectival and defines locum etc., so that the subj. is not required. Quae agrees with causa by the common attraction of the relative and other pronouns to the gender of the predicate or complement. Cf. pecora quod etc., 48, l. 23.
XLVIII.

1. biduo, quo etc., 'two days after this occurrence.'
5. proluit, subject, tempestas.
11, spatio etc., 'within a space of thirty miles,' i.e. between the two rivers. The Cinga is now the Cinca.
12. angustiis, the abl. without in is common after contineri.
18 quo neque etc., 'when the corn was not yet cut and piled in heaps, nor yet far from maturity,' i.e. had grown too tall and strong to be used as fodder. The mss. have in hibernis, which is altered in most edd. to in herbis.
22. reliqui etc., 'and whatever had been left' (asyndeton). Reliqui is the usual gen. after partitive words.
23. quod secundum etc., 'which might have been a second resource against famine,' when there was no corn; cf. note on 47, 1. 6. The imperf. of possum, debco, etc., and periphrases with the gerund are regularly in the indic. where we should expect subj.
29. utribus, to be used as buoys or swimming belts; cf. Liv. 21. 27. This substantival ut-clause is subject to est.

XLIX.

6. facultates, 'opportunities for procuring.'

L.

6. cum ... tum, 'not only ... but also.'
9. rapidissimo flumine, abl. abs., 'owing to the great rapidity of the stream,' cf. altiore aqua, ch. 25.

LI.

2. habeant. The subj. implies that this is part of the message. Some edd. read habebant, which makes it simply a historical fact, cf. quae fuerat, 47, 1. 6.
4. ut fert etc., 'according to the prevailing custom in Gaul,' lit., 'as Gallic custom leads.' The Ruteni were a Celtic tribe, occupying the district now called Rouergne.
7. nullus ordo, sc. erat.
9. usi ... licentia, 'with the same lack of discipline as in former times and on former journeys' (or 'marches'). Note the general sense of utor.
10. erant ... erant ... erant. This repetition (epanaphora) conveys the idea of enumerating all the various elements of this convoy. Cf. multum ... multum in 49, 1. 2.

13. flumina, 'the floods' (like aquae in ch. 48) since ad flumen above shows that the Segre alone was the obstacle.

18. dum ... potuit, 'as long as the conflict could be kept up with a foe like themselves,' i.e. with cavalry alone. In this sense dum takes various tenses of indic., but in the common sense meaning merely 'while,' and denoting a longer period, during part of which something else has happened, it is joined with pres. indic., even when past time is referred to.

21. hoc pugnae etc., 'the time gained by this fight helped our men greatly to secure their safety,' lit. 'brought our men a great impulse towards safety.'

26. numerus is used not only of number but also quantity, as in the expression, magnus numerus frumenti.

LII.

1. his ... omnibus, 'owing to all these things,' abl. of cause.

2. non solum etc. 'not only through present scarcity,' but also 'through fear as to the future.' The mss. read præsentis, which would agree with temporis, but the sense would be the same.

4. ad denarios etc., 'the price of corn had risen to fifty denarii a modius.' This measure was about a third of our bushel, its usual price was rather less than a denarius (about 8d.).

10. illi ... rebus, 'while the others had abundance of everything.'

14. inopiam ... tutabatur = suos ab inopia tutabatur; cf. iniurias defendere, 7, 1. 29.

LIII.

2. pleniora etc., 'with even greater fulness and wealth of detail' (than the facts warranted).

3. rumor fingebat. Some edd. read rumore affingebant, 'they invented besides in talk.'

6. domum concursus etc., thronging of visitors to A.'s house. Domum ad Afraniun is the regular expression, though A. himself was away.
10. novissimi, 'the last,' always used in this sense; the comp. and sup. of novus, 'new,' being usually supplied by recens; magis novus is also used.

LIV.

5. cuius generis = eius generis quod, 'of the type with which his experience of Britain in former years had made him acquainted.'

6. carinae, etc., 'the keels and framework were made of light wood.' These were 'coracles.'

10. milites etc., 'takes his soldiers across the river.' Note the double acc. construction like traecit in 55, l. 2.

14. ex utraque parte, 'from both sides at once.'

LV.

8. eos propellant. The pron. is necessary, because the new verb requires a different case from the preceding.

4. huc = his, 'to these.'

10. adduxerat. Note how the plupf. here and the imperf. praeerat, l. 12, are used after the historical pres. as if it were a true perfect.

13. insulam, supposed to be the modern Ratoneau.

LVII.

4. id muneris, 'that service,' gen. of thing measured.

9. pugnatum est etc., 'the conflict was maintained on both sides with the greatest bravery and vigour.'

LVIII.

3. impetusque etc., 'and did not wait to receive their attacks,' i.e. the charge with the beak (rostrum).

6. remos ... detergere, 'to sweep off their oars as they ran past.'

10. cum ... tum etiam, 'not only ... but also.' When the time of the two verbs is the same, as here, cum is followed by indic., but when the cum-clause denotes time prior to that of the tum-clause, it takes the subj.

12. neque dum = et nondum, 'and not yet.'
15. non eundem etc., 'were not equally serviceable for speed.'
16. dum = dummodo, 'provided that.'
19. diversi, cf. note on 40, l. 22.

LIX.
1. ad Ilerdam. Caesar was not in the town, but near it, hence the prep.; cf. 41, l. 8.
5. non longo etc. The abl. of measure of space is used where we might expect the acc. of space covered. Alias is used only of time by Caesar.
9. ex itinere, 'in the middle of their march.'

LX.
1. Oscenses, 'the people of Osca,' now Huesca. Calagurris is now Caladhorra.
2. contributi, 'confederate,' is usually followed by dat. or acc. with in.
4. Tarraco, is now Tarragona. The Jucetani and Ausetani were tribes in the region of Catalonia, in the N.E. of Hispania Citerior, while the Illurgavonenses were in the E. of that province.
10. signa ... transfert, 'goes over to him bodily while on guard.' Cf. note on 21, l. 13.
11. magna etc., sc. facta est or erat.
14. de auxiliis etc., 'about the succours to be brought by the legions,' cf. 39. Auxilia usually means 'auxiliary infantry,' as distinct from legionaries; so in 61, l. 18.

LXI.
6. partem aliquam, 'a considerable part.'
12. huic consilio etc., 'this plan was recommended also by the consideration that, of the two opposite parties, those States which had sided with S. in the former war, and been conquered, feared the name and authority of P. even in his absence, while those' etc. Observe ille, 'the following.'
19. suis locis, 'in a favourable position.'
20. conquirere ... adduci. Note the change from act. to pass. infin., which no doubt is intentional. Those who sought out the vessels would not necessarily themselves bring them to Octogesa. (Cf. conquirant and deducendas current, 30, l. 4.) This town apparently lay on the left bank of the Sègre, near its junction with the Ebro.

23, XXX. The mss. read xx, which is considered too small a distance.

LXII.

2. continuato etc., ‘carrying on the work continuously for a day and a night.’

3. hue, ‘to this point,’ explained by following ut-clause.

7. extarent. The mss. read exstare, with which infin. possent alone would be repeated.

10. vadum, evidently not a natural ford, but the result of Caesar’s engineering, as yet only considered fit for cavalry.

LXIII.

6. relinquebatur etc., ‘nothing remained for C. but to annoy, etc.’

8. magnum ... habebat, ‘involved a long détour to reach it.’ The ut-clause which follows is of course consecutive—‘so that.’

11. de tertia vigilia, ‘in the third watch,’ cf. de media nocte. The night was divided into four watches.

12. sese ad etc., ‘appeared on their rear.’

14. morari.... The object has to be supplied.

LXIV.

4. nonnumquam etc., ‘that they sometimes halted the rear-guard, and so became divided, while at other times a general advance was made.’

8. dolere, ‘were expressing their vexation.’ This and the verbs circulare, adire and obsecrace are historical infins., so the subject milites is nom.

11. ut per eos etc., ‘to tell Caesar not to spare them toil or danger.’ An uncommon use of certiorem facere (usually ‘to inform’), cf. B.G. 3. 5, certiores fecit suos paulisper proelium intermitterent.

15. tantae etc., ‘to the river in its swollen condition.’
21. magnoque etc., 'stationing a large number of beasts of burden in the river above and below' (the line of march) in order to break the current.

26. milium sex. Thus the new ford was three miles higher up the river than the camp.

29. nonam, i.e., about 3 p.m., as the Roman day began at sunrise.

LXV.

8. a milibus etc., 'at a distance of five miles difficult and narrow roads immediately followed.' This form of expression (ab with measure of distance) is used when the place from which the distance is reckoned is not mentioned.

LXVI.

5. vasa...conclamari, 'that the shout be raised for packing the baggage.' The trumpet was sounded three times when a Roman army was to march. At the first blast the tents were struck and the baggage packed; at the second everything was got ready, and at the third the march began.

12. Saxa, a Celtiberian whom Caesar made a Roman citizen. He afterwards became a tribune of the plebs and then governor of Syria.

15. excipere, 'there followed' used absolutely.

16. qui prior etc., 'whoever first secured this defile, would have no difficulty in barring the enemy's way.'

LXVII.

5. pridie noctu, 'the night before,' cf. cras mane.

6. argumenti etc., 'took it as a proof.'

10. timori etc., 'is wont to obey the dictates of fear rather than of conscience.'

11. at luce etc., 'but by daylight shame has much power through (being under) the eyes of all, and the presence of the tribunes and centurions too inspires fear.' For luce ... posse ... metum the mss. read lucem ... per se ... muttum which does not give a very satisfactory sense.

15. etsi ... accepto. Observe the concessive conjunction with abl. abs.

17. vincit, 'prevails,' 'is carried.'
LXVIII.

8. ut arma etc., 'so that the arms had to be passed from hand to hand.'

9. alii ab aliis, 'by one another.'

11. eum. This pron. probably is attracted to the gender of laborem by the idiom noticed on 47, l. 6, and is explained by the si-clause following—'they thought that if they could cut off... that would be the end of all their toils.'

LXIX.

4. necessarii ... inopia, 'by starvation.' The or. obl. is introduced by vocibus.

9. quod ... videbant, 'the fact that they saw' etc., a substantival clause which is subject to adiuvabat.

13. superare etc., 'were getting beyond the direction of their camp,' i.e. past the point where they were in a line with (e regione) the camp. As A.'s camp lay between Caesar's and the mouth of the defile leading to the Ebro, C. had to get round it, if possible. He started as if to return towards Lerida, made a long détour to the right, and when hidden by hills, wound round their camp at a distance, so that when next seen he was as near the river as they, though his route was rougher. Then a race ensued to the mouth of the defile.

15. fugiens laboris, 'disposed to shirk his work,' the only instance in Caesar of a pres. participle used with an objective gen.

quin putaret, 'as not to think.'

16. conclamatur etc., 'the cry To arms! is raised.'

LXX.

7. priores, adverbial, going with attigissent—'if they should be the first to reach the mountains they were making for.'

8. ipsi etc. 'This clause is virtually concessive—'though they would escape the danger themselves, they would not be able to save the baggage' etc.

10. quibus, dat. after ferri.

12. ex ... rupibus, 'after the great rocks' (ch. 68).
NOTES.

17. qui erat etc., ‘the highest of all in sight.’ This is the regular expression, not in conspectu excelsissimum.

21. ingis, ‘along the heights,’ abl. of direction of motion.

24. minimam partem, ‘a moment’ = *punctum."

LXXI.

1. erat ... rei, ‘it was an opportunity for striking a decisive blow.’ Rem gerere, ‘to carry on war,’ ‘to fight.’

6. idque, i.e., ut confligeretur.

8. ne dubitaret, (asking him) ‘not to hesitate,’ oblique petition.

11. sui timoris etc., ‘had betrayed their alarm.’

13. collatis ... conferti, ‘huddled together, with their standards collected into one place.’

LXXII.

1. *eam is inserted because the next clause explains what the hope was. * We say simply ‘had conceived the hope.’

5. amitteret. This and the following subj. express de-liberation—‘why should he lose’?—amittam in oratio recta.

9. civium, obj. gen., ‘pity for his countrymen.’

11. rem obtinere, ‘to carry his point,’ ‘succeed.’

12. plerisque, dat., ‘did not commend itself to very many’ of the officers. We find another constr. of probo in 74. l. 31.

18. sese referunt, ‘retire,’ like se recipiunt.

20. quam proxtme etc., ‘as near as possible,’ cf. note on 84, l. 19.

LXXIII.

2. omnem etc., ‘they had given up all hope of (supplying) their commissariat and (reaching) the R. Ebro.

6. nuntiantur, ‘word is brought to them that the men told off to fetch water’ etc. The *personal pass. constr. with verbs of saying, thinking etc., is preferred in Latin, see note on 14, l. 6.

9. alariarum. The troops supplied by the provinces were called alarii or auxilia. The former term was applied in earlier days to the Socii, or Italian allies.

10. vallum ducere, ‘to construct a stockade,’ prob. to the Sègre.
LXXIV.

2. quem quisque etc., 'each one inquires for and calls out any acquaintance or fellow-townsmen he had in the camp' (of Caesar, which was quite near).

6. eorum etc., (they say) 'it is by their favour that they are alive.'

7. imperatoris, etc., 'they inquire about the general's good faith, whether they could safely put themselves in his power.'

8. quod non. Observe that the negative is not carried on into the clause introduced by que, which may be translated 'but,' like atque in 44, l. 18.

13. quibus etc. The participle is probably conditional—'if assurances should be given on these points.'

14. signa translaturos, cf. 60, l. 10.

23. per quem etc., 'by whose introduction each of them had a chance of gaining access to Caesar.' Ad. comm., 'access by recommendation.'

27. erant etc., 'everywhere expressions of joy and congratulations were heard.' Elsewhere in Caesar plenus takes gen.

29. videbantur is taken twice, in both relative clauses.

LXXV.

4. quieto ... animo, 'calmly and with resignation.' On account of his conduct on this occasion Afranius was subsequently accused of treason, Book iii. 83.

5. non deserit se, 'did not give himself up.' For familia, cf. 14, l. 20.

6. praetoria cohorte, 'the general's bodyguard,' see Introd. ii. § 8.

11. sinistras etc., 'they roll their cloaks round their left arms,' as a substitute for the shields which they had left behind.

LXXVI.

2. neu ... obsecrat, 'and implores them not to deliver him or P., his commander-in-chief, to the enemy to be punished.' An exaggerated appeal.
NOTES.

6. iurent. They had already been bound by the regular sacramentum, or military oath, when first enrolled. This was now renewed.

9. idem etc., 'he makes A. take the same oath.'

12. penes quem etc., 'that whoever had one of Caesar's men with him should produce him.' Supply ab eo with producatur.

18. rem etc., 'brought things back to their former relations of hostility.'

LXXVII.

6. magno etc., 'he treated with much respect.'

7. equites here refers to those knights who had been military tribunes. The military tribunes were all of equestrian rank, though knights serving in the army were not necessarily tribunes.

LXXVIII.

1. pabulatione, 'by the difficulty of procuring forage.' Here premi takes abl. of the thing in respect of which the pressure is felt.

3. dierum VII., 'seven days' supply.' The mss. read xxii., but as there were fifty legionary cohorts and eighty of auxiliaries, and four days had not yet elapsed since they left Ilerda, they could not have been in actual want, had the legionaries really carried 22 days' supply; besides, such a weight in addition to their ordinary load would have been excessive even for legionaries. The copyists very often made mistakes in numerals.

13. quo spatio etc., 'and in such a distance they perceived that the undertaking might be liable to more mischances.'

17. nullum etc., 'immediately the rearmost became engaged.'

LXXIX.

2. novissimum etc., 'brought up the rear.' Plures just after is adverbial—'in larger numbers' than usually composed the rear guard.

7. suberat. When cum has the sense 'whenever,' 'as often as,' it is followed by the indic. even of historical tenses in the best writers of Caesar's time.
9. in aversos, ‘on their rear.’
10. magn... res, ‘the situation was one of great peril.’
11. legionum signa, ‘the main body of the legions.’
16. tantum etc., ‘so far were they from getting help from their cavalry.’ The mss. read auxilliis, which Madvig has with great probability corrected.
19. ultro, ‘actually,’ doing just what the cavalry should have done for them.

LXXX.

3. subsistunt, ‘men halt.’ The subject is quite indefinite, as the next words, ut tum accidit, show that what precedes is a general statement.
6. una fronte, ‘with a single front,’ i.e. with no fortification except on the side facing the enemy.
12. animum adversa, written separately for animadversa: cf. animum adverterunt, 1. 9. We find animadverso in 81, 1. 9.
14. hora decima apparently only refers to the foragers who might include infantry and so would require a rest. The next line shows that the cavalry were not to wait till the tenth hour.

LXXXI.

4. natura... loco, ‘in a position naturally unfavourable.’
6. et... non instead of neque marks that this was an unusual course.
9. erumperent. Note the change of subject.

illi etc., ‘observing the faulty situation of their camp, they keep pushing out their lines all night, and changing camp for camp,’ i.e. they construct new lines in a better position for defence, nearer to Caesar (only 2000 paces from his camp), but further from water.
14. praesenti etc. ‘their present disadvantage was being remedied at the cost of other disadvantages.’ Malo is dat.
18. male haberii, cf. 63, 1. 8.
22. quo = ad quas, sc. eruptiones.
24. ad iter. The mss. read ad id, which would mean ‘for sallying out.’
NOTES.

LXXXII.

8. contra etc., 'for the appearance of having shirked a battle, against the feeling of his soldiers and public opinion (lit. the talk of all), was damaging him greatly,' i.e. destroying his prestige.

12. spatii etc., 'owing to the narrow space, even if the enemy were put to flight, a victory could not help much towards the decision.' Madvig has by a fine emendation restored proper sense to the passage, the mss. reading brevitas and victoriae—'the shortness of the space...could not help much towards the decision'!

15. hinc duas etc., 'two-thirds of this (space).' Hinc = ex his. So tres partes, 'three quarters.' In fractions when the denom. exceeds the numerator by only one it is not expressed in Latin.

20. signa inferentibus, 'if they advanced upon him.'

LXXXIII.

2. in subsidiis, 'as a reserve.' Thus the auxiliary foot formed practically a third line, but Caesar's army was drawn up more in the usual order, i.e. the three lines were composed wholly of legionaries. See Introd. ii. § 4.

6. suae cuiusque etc., 'belonging to their respective legions,' for suae quaeque, by a curious attraction of quisque to the case of suus which frequently occurs, as in Livy, 33. 46, pecunia quae in stipendium Romanis suo quoque anno penderetur, where quaeque would be regular.

7. media acie, i.e. in the intervals between the legionary cohorts.

8. tenere etc., 'both generals seemed to keep to their purpose.' That is, though Caesar posted his skirmishers and cavalry in their proper place, so as to have an advantage if obliged to fight, he showed by not making them advance that he would not take the offensive; while Afranius, who did not venture to bring up his useless cavalry or foreign auxiliaries to the front, still by remaining in order of battle forced Caesar to do the same, and thus stopped his works.

LXXXIV.

1. omnibus rebus, 'in every respect,' the blockade being complete. Inopia in l. 3 is abl. of cause.
9. ipsis, himself and Petreius.

11. satis, etc. 'they had now satisfied the claims of duty and had been punished enough.' The subject se must be supplied here and in the following sentences, as in 6, l. 13.

14. prohiberi ingressu, 'they were prevented from moving.'

17. ad ultimum etc., either 'to come forth to suffer extreme punishment' or 'to proceed to the last extremity against themselves,' i.e. 'to commit suicide'; cf. 22, l. 23.

19. quam potest etc., 'as humbly as possible.' The sense would be the same without potest.

LXXXV.

1. nulli etc., 'there was no one in the world for whom this rôle either of complaint or self-pity had been more inappropriate.'

6. ut quam etc., 'in order that there might be as little prejudice as possible to the cause of peace,' i.e. that nothing might be done which would make peace impossible, except at terrible cost.

9. illius, probably taken with exercitus, 'the opposing army.'

11. omnium suorum, including Afranius and Petreius themselves.

12. omnium ordinum etc., 'the part played by all ranks had been a merciful one,' lit. 'had rested on pity.' Same sense of partes as in l. 2.

20. illorum humilitate, 'taking advantage of their humiliation,' an abl. of attendant circumstances.

21. quibus etc., 'anything by which his own resources might be increased.'

26. submissos, 'sent to their aid'; cf. 43, l. 16.

31. in se etc., 'it was against him that novel commands were established.' Here and in the two sentences following se is apparently acc., while in se uno, l. 38, is 'in his case alone.'

34. iura ... commutari, by the Lex Pompeia De Provinciis. See Introd. i. § 5.

ex praetura, 'on resigning the praetorship'; cf. 22, l. 12.
37. nihil etc., 'did not avail to prevent men who had served with credit in former wars being called out,' etc. The probati had been honourably discharged. For quin the mss. reading is quod, 'because,' and some edd. have cum, 'since.'

40. cum honore, i.e. a triumph, which had not been granted to Caesar, though frequent supplicationes, or public thanksgivings had been voted for his victories in Gaul.

44. id agere, 'was it his object.' Hoc ago is thus used in oratio recta.

47. excederent, 'let them quit,' oblique petition, subj. representing an imperative.

LXXXVI.

3. ut ... ferrent. This clause is epexegetical (or explanatory) of id.

4. ultro, 'actually,' 'on the contrary,' as in 79, l. 19.

8. omni ... fide, 'though every pledge should be given.'

11. huc, 'to this conclusion,' explained by the ut-clause following.

12. ad Varum. The Varus (Var) was the E. boundary of Further Gaul.

14. a Caesare cavetur, 'a guarantee is given by C.'

LXXXVII.

4. quae ... suos, 'such things, that is, as were in the hands of his men.' This relative clause limits quod, 'whatever,' in that which precedes.

5. qui amiserant. The strict or. obl. requires amisissent, but the clause practically means 'the losers'; cf. note on quae causa fuerat, 47, l. 6.

9. in ius, 'to have them tried.'

10. cum stipendium etc., 'when P. and A. were being pressed by the legions for their pay in almost a mutinous way, and said the pay-day had not yet arrived,' etc. Flagito can take a double acc., as in B. G. 1. 16, Caesar Haedusorum frumentum ... flagitare. Here the mss. read flagitaretur, with stipendium as subject, but this makes it necessary to change postulatum est into postularunt (with some edd.) or Petreius etc. would be nom. without a verb. Dicerent probably depends on cum, as cuius = et eius, but it may also be explained as virtual or. obl.; cf. note on 20, 1. 11.

14. duas etc., 'he ordered two of his own legions to march before, and the rest to follow, so as to encamp at no great distance from one another.' He kept two legions to send into Further Spain, so that four legions were told off to march to the Var.

16. non longo go closely together, otherwise we should have ne.

17. hoc praescripto, 'in accordance with this order,' abl. of condition.
